CHAMBERLAIN SAYS HITLER MISSED CHANCE

Prime Minister Now Confident Britain Will Win the War.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 4 — Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today he was "ten times as confident" of victory now as he was when the war began because Adolf Hitler "missed the bus" by failing to use the arms superiority Germany had at the start.

The prime minister addressed the conservative party council shortly a day after shaking up his government to knit it into a tighter organization and to put chief responsibility for war strategy on the shoulders of Winston Churchill, energetic first lord of the admiralty.

Britain still is building up her strength, Chamberlain declared, while Germany is close to her limits.

Chamberlain hinted at impending new measures to make the allies' blockade of Germany escape-proof.

On the other hand, he declared there is no shortage of food in Britain.

Blockade Hampered

He said consideration for neutrals had hampered the allies' blockade but warned that "it can not be expected that we should allow Germany indefinitely to profit by our scrupulousness and to draw aid and comfort from neutrals who are not free agents and now know in their hearts, whatever they may say, that our victory spells freedom for them whereas our defeat would doom them to slavery."

The recent British-French declaration of a closer alliance gave the "best assurance" that "we shall not be cheated out of the fruits of victory and that the essential elements of European security will be available to us when the war is over," he told the council.

GERMANY CLAIMS SHIPPING DESTROYED

By The Associated Press

The German high command announced today that about 40,000 tons of British shipping had been destroyed or damaged by far-ranging Nazi bombers Wednesday afternoon. Three British "outpost" boats were destroyed and a British destroyer was included among the damaged vessels, the Germans said, acknowledging that two German planes were forced down and another was missing. The British lost one plane, the Germans said.

That the fighting in the North Sea was of considerable scope was indicated by Norwegian reports. Persons in Bergen and other Norwegian coastal towns reported they heard heavy gunfire at sea and saw numbers of planes and ships in action.

A German plane which landed at Stavanger, Norway, was burned by its crew, but the wreckage bore bullet marks indicative of a savage battle.

Nazi Attack Broken

On the western front, the French announced that a strong German infantry attack had been broken up by a French outpost in the Nied sector.

France's Premier Paul Reynaud, in an English-language broadcast to the United States, said last night there would be no "phoney" peace with Germany. The French intend to finish what they have set out to do, he said.

In France trouble loomed for the government when the powerful Radical-Socialist group in the chamber of deputies was reported to have decided to demand the resignation of Premier Paul Reynaud unless he can show a substantial increase in his parliamentary support.

The British-French blockade against Germany, the weapon the allies have most persistently used, brought a warning gesture from faraway Japan.

The Japanese navy threatened to "take action" if the blockade were applied "illegally" to Soviet Russian shipping destined for Germany. Entrance of the blockaders into Chosen strait would be considered illegal, it was indicated.

The Chinese, still fighting Japan after 33 months, reported destruction of 30 Japanese warplanes at a north China base, and told of a new offensive in South China.

Spokesmen for the Wang Ching-Wei central government of China, set up under Japanese control in an effort to end the war, criticized the United States for refusal to recognize this interior regime.

PERMIT 'FIXING' TRIAL NEAR END

Man Accused in Wyandot Co. Case Expected To Testify; Permit Holders Heard.

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, April 4—William E. Cahill of Columbus was expected to take the witness stand late this afternoon to defend himself against charges of impersonating a state liquir inspector, obtaining money under false pretenses and issuing certifications without a state securities permit.

Testimony that Cahill, who was arrested at Mansfield March 8, represented himself as a state inspector, was given by three witnesses yesterday. This morning the state's testimony centered primarily around the charge that Cahill promised to "fix" liquor permits for members of the Ohio State Liquor Dealers, Inc., which he said he represented.

Tell of $18 Memberships

Among the state's witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. Pearly Derringer of Marseilles who testified that Cahill obtained $9 from them in part payment of membership fee in the "association." They stated that the membership, which was to have cost $18 a year, was taken out on Cahill's promise to assist them in preventing anyone else securing a license in Marseilles and also to assist them in renewing the license for their beer parlor.

Others testifying for the state were Glen Hosack of Fredericktown, A. R. Youngpeter of Kenton, Mrs. Marion Gossard of Dunkirk, Albert Martin and Dale Ward of Mt. Blanchard, Lloyd Candel of Bucyrus and Mike Doney of Upper Sandusky, all liquor or beer parlor operators, who testified regarding Cahill's visits to their places of business.

Jess Hile of Upper Sandusky testified this morning he was in the cafe operated by Doney when Cahill solicited an $18 membership there.

State Official Called

Another witness who took the stand for the state was John B. Martin of Columbus, assistant chief of the state securities division, who testified Cahill was the only officer and stockholder of the Ohio State Liquor Dealers, Inc.

James Blair, state liquor law enforcement official, declared "fixing" of permits was impossible. Gail Williams, Mt. Blanchard garage mechanic, testified Cahill refused to pay sales tax on parts used in repairing his automobile on ground that it was a state car.

The case is being heard by Common Pleas Judge Russell H. Kear without a jury. Court officials said the testimony probably will be completed late today.

MAN IN COURT ON FOURTH DRUNKEN DRIVING CHARGE

Jury trial of a fourth drunken driving charge against Clarence Walker, 53, of Oak Ridge court started in municipal court this morning.

Walker was arrested by police March 26 and pleaded not guilty to the drunken driving charge which court officials said is the fourth of its kind filed against him here in recent years. He has been free under $200 bond pending the trial.

Selection of the jury required the entire morning and attorneys said testimony probably will not be concluded until late today or tomorrow morning. Walker is represented by Grant E. Mouser Jr. and City Solicitor Kenneth A. Robinson is representing the prosecution.

The program which will be given in connection with the announcement of the woman honored will be on the theme of Americanism.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. Lydia Ralston, president; Mrs. Bertha Hanson, senior vice president; Mrs. Lalla Hartley, junior vice president; Mrs. Lucille Edgington, treasurer; Mrs. Esther Bowersock, chaplain; Mrs. Helen Miller, conductress; Mrs. Mertie Saunders, guard; Mrs. Delsia Baker and Mrs. Mildred Pickeral, trustees.

Mrs. Ralston and Mrs. Hanson were named to represent the auxiliary at the Memorial day committee meeting April 11 at the Legion Dugout.

The auxiliary will sponsor a benefit card party on April 13 to raise money for maintenance of the national V. F. W. home for widows and orphans at Eaton Rapids, Mich. The sale of "buddy poppies" on May 25 was discussed.

WOUNDED PROSPECT TRUCKER IMPROVES

Officials Continue Probe Into Wednesday Attack.

Authorities today continued their investigation of the report by Delbert Milligan, 27-year-old Prospect trucker, that he was slugged and robbed by highwaymen.

Milligan is recovering at City hospital where he was removed after being found unconscious at his home yesterday. The attending physician reported his condition today as "fairly good" and that he spent a restful night.

Sheriff Fred P. Miller, conducting the investigation, planned to talk with the victim again today to get a detailed account of the incident. During the sheriff's visit to the hospital yesterday Milligan continued to suffer sporadic convulsions. He, however, had given a piecemeal account to attendants who remained at his bedside throughout the day.

Milligan said he was enroute home from hauling a load of scrap metal to Columbus when he was halted at Leonardsburg by three unknown men who inquired directions. The attack and robbery followed, he said.

15 ESCAPE INJURY AS SHIP OVERSHOOTS FIELD

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, April 4—Twelve passengers and a crew of three escaped injury when a 14-ton Transcontinental & Western Air skyliner overshot the Allegheny county airport and was blown down a 15-foot embankment by a heavy gale last night.

The plane slid into a bramble patch, shearing off the landing gear and damaging a propeller. TWA officials estimated damage at $5,000.

A thunderstorm caused the airliner to return here after resuming its New York-Kansas City run.

CCC OFFICES OPENED; CAMP SITE SURVEY WORK STARTED

G.O.P. Opens Drive After Pre-View of Candidates

4,000 Go Home To Sell Idea of "Party's Position of Leadership" to Voters In Coming Campaign.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—Approximately 4,000 Republican party workers, "pepped up" by a statewide rally, set out today to sell the G.O.P. to Ohioans to a modern "instrument of leadership, looking forward not backward."

After seeing and hearing the Republican candidates for every important office, the delegates to the pre-primary convention carried these messages back to the precincts:

From Kenneth F. Simpson, national committeeman from New York and the convention keynote speaker—"our task is to convince the sorely troubled people of this country that the Republican party is an alive, up-to-date, modern instrument of national leadership, looking forward not backward, firmly determined to preserve whatever real progress has been achieved during the past ten years and is competent now, in 1940, to succeed where the New Deal has failed."

From U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination — "Ohio was a leader in the turn against the New Deal. We have not engaged in mud-slinging, but have attacked on the issues, with sound remedies. * * * the New Deal meddles with everybody's business and doesn't attend to its own business. * * * we can remedy the abuses without taking over the regulation of everything and everybody."

Bricker Cites Record

From Gov. Bricker, a candidate for renomination—"we have given the people honesty, efficiency and economy in the administration of their state government. * * * there have been no new taxes. * * * last year we reduced expenses for salaries and office administration $5,146,000. * * * we closed the year with a net cash surplus of $3,369,000. * * * we returned to the communities in subsidies $12,869,000 more than they received in 1938."

State Chairman Ed D. Schorr explained that the convention was held to review Republican accomplishments and determine "the lines upon which we are to conduct the political battle of 1940."

While Simpson and Senator Taft were given a warm welcome, an observer remarked that "the roof almost caved in" when Governor Bricker finished speaking, so great was the ovation.

Although Bricker is supporting Taft for the presidential nomination, the governor has been widely mentioned as a presidential possibility himself.

Organization of a "draft Bricker committee" was announced in New York by Crichton Clarke, its chairman and president of the American Fair Trade Council.

He said that the committee, formed without consulting Bricker, anticipated a deadlock at the national convention and hoped to have the delegates turn to the Ohio governor as a second choice.

Observers, watching closely delegates' reaction to the candidates in the May 4 primary, saw

TO HEAD CANADA

WILL ORGANIZE DRAINAGE JOBS

Defiance Official Shifted to Marion To Set Up List of Projects.

Establishment of the civilian conservation corps camp granted Marion county last month moved nearer reality today. Local office quarters were opened by CCC officials and preliminary work was begun at the camp site on the county home farm, east of Marion.

F. A. Daum, superintendent of the soil conservation service at Defiance, was transferred here to organize the CCC work program. He will have quarters in the commissioners' office at the courthouse and will assist local groups in organizing drainage projects.

Open in June

Opening of the camp is set for early June when, according to tentative plans, another Ohio camp will be transferred here. The local camp may be placed in operation several weeks earlier in the event that legislative action provides sufficient funds for opening a new camp, officials reported.

Should CCC activity remain in its present scale it is likely that the Defiance camp will be transferred here. The Defiance camp is composed of 240 Ohio enrollees.

Mr. Daum was sent here by C. L. Parish of Lima, area conservation supervisor. His task will be to organize the CCC work program. For the present work to be done by the CCC will be confined largely to drainage work in Marion county. Later projects will extend into portions of adjoining counties and also take up soil erosion control.

Inauguration of a project, Mr. Daum related today, begins with the formation of groups interested in any particular drainage area. Surveys of the proposed work follow to determine estimates of the cost. Cost, with the exception of CCC labor, is paid by the sponsors.

Takes Applications

Cost for any particular project usually is limited to materials used, rental of equipment and maintainance of government equipment. Applications for ditch work may be filed immediately with Mr. Daum at the commissioners' office and they will be considered in the order submitted.

During the next several weeks Mr. Daum hopes to be able to set up a work program of sufficient proportion to assure continuous operation of the camp once it is opened. No new drainage work will be undertaken at present, the projects being restricted to renovation and maintenance of present public drains.

Work at the 10-acre camp site was begun this week with a preliminary survey of the tract. Later the land will be cleared for the erection of camp buildings. It is understood that structures already fabricated will be brought here and erected to provide housing and recreational facilities for the enrollees.

Length of time the camp will be maintained is not definite. Duration of its operation depends on several factors, principally such factors as the appropriation of federal funds to carry on the work and the amount of work to be done in this section. Under normal conditions, however, it is expected that the camp may remain here as long as two years.

Traffic Problem Cures Known

Remedies Explained at Seminar To Be Outlined; Enforcement, Education, Engineering Emphasized.

By BOB BYRD

In a three-day traffic safety seminar held at Columbus this week by the Commercial Investment Trust, Inc., a national automobile financing organization, some 50 Ohio newspaper men including myself heard the nation's top flight experts on nearly every phase of the traffic problem.

In a series of articles to follow this one, the various phases of the problem and remedies recommended by seminar speakers will be presented by The Star.

Traffic problems in Marion, judged in the light of talks given at the seminar, are little different than in any other community, and the remedies for them are the same, fundamentally.

Reviewing the entire seminar in brief, several facts stand out:

First, after a period of years in which efforts were made on a trial and error basis, a definite technique has been worked out for remedying traffic problems. In other words, the cure for the ailment has been learned and reducing traffic deaths is only a matter of applying known technique to each local problem.

Second, the remedial plan recommended by seminar speakers has been proved by the experience of cities that have adopted it. Traffic deaths in such cities have been reduced markedly, along with accidents in general, and in many cases the death toll has been cut in half within a year or two.

Third, the cure is not a mysterious formula but a simple one. It consists of (1) enforcement, (2) education and (3) engineering.

Incidentally, all seminar speakers are agreed that the "three E's" are listed in the order of their importance. Enforcement is the first requisite, and along with it must be a sincere desire of public officials to solve the problem. The educational phase is necessary to enlist public cooperation and help. Third, engineering can do much to make the highways and streets safer.

One other point frequently emphasized by seminar speakers is that safety should be and can be brought to the streets and highways without seriously handicapping the efficiency of traffic. Pointing out that one sure way to stop all traffic deaths would be to take all traffic off the streets and highways, they emphasized that any plan of safety which seriously handicaps the efficiency of traffic is short-sighted.

These and other phases of the problem and the remedies outlined by seminar speakers will be treated in detail in the series of articles to follow.

Dies Committee Defied by Another Communist Leader

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 4 — The Dies committee met defiance today from another Communist party leader, Philip Frankfeld of Boston, and voted to cite him for contempt in an uproarious session from which Frankfeld said he was ejected by capitol police.

The Boston Communist, executive secretary of the Communist party in New England, refused to answer a single committee question unless he was given permission to read a resolution which he said 10,000 citizens of Massachusetts had adopted in the Boston arena last Sunday.

"I will not answer a single question until you listen to the voice of the American people," the chubby Communist official shouted, his black eyes flashing.

Request Refused

Chairman Dies (D-Tex.) of the investigation group refused permission to read the resolution, and Frankfeld roared:

"Do you mean to silence the voices of 10,000 Americans?"

Dies banged for order, rebuked the witness for making such statements, turned to committee members for a moment and then announced the contempt citation.

"The American people will issue a writ of habeus corpus against you," Frankfeld shouted as Dies ordered him from the witness stand.

The pudy Communist turned to the press table nearby and hastily distributed copies of the resolution he had tried to read.

ENGINEER CANDIDATE WITHDRAWS NAME

Candidacy Is Dropped by Grover C. Snyder.

Grover C. Snyder today announced his withdrawal as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county engineer. His action, coming on the last day for withdrawing candidacies, leaves Carl H. Tozzer, incumbent, unopposed for the nomination.

Mr. Snyder's withdrawal follows a ruling this week by the court of appeals in Summit county that candidates for engineer must have been registered professional engineers and surveyors at the time they filed. Mr. Snyder was a registered professional engineer at filing time but had not registered as a professional surveyor.

The regulation requiring candidates to hold both registrations became effective while Mr. Snyder was out of touch with engineering and was serving as liquidator for several banks.

Mr. Snyder announced he plans to apply for registration as a professional surveyor in the near future, but it would be too late to qualify him technically as a candidate.

Mr. Snyder, who lives near Waldo, has held the offices of deputy county engineer, resident state highway engineer, division state highway engineer and chief engineer in the maintenance division of the state highway department.

Boston Wool

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, April 4—Most kinds of domestic wools were very quiet in the Boston market today. An occasional car of new bright fleece wool in country packed lots, containing three eighths and quarter blood grades, was selling at 34 to 35 cents, mostly 34 cents, in the grease delivered to mills. Scoured fall Texas wool was receiving some demand at about steady prices.

WHEAT PRICE UP ON CROP REPORTS

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 4—The wheat market scored gains of more than a cent today following release of crop survey figures indicating condition of winter wheat April 1 was near the lowest on record for that date.

While private forecasts suggesting the 1940 winter wheat harvest may be the fourth smallest in the last quarter century were about in line with trade expectations, buying gained momentum as the session progressed due to continued dry weather in the southwest.

Wheat closed ⅞-1¼ cent higher than yesterday, May $1.05¼-⅜, July $1.04½-⅝; corn unchanged to ⅜ higher, May 56⅞-57, July 58; oats ¼-⅝ higher.

STOCKS POST HIGHS FOR 1940

Gains Made by Some Issues Despite Heavy Profit Taking Today.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 4—Despite heavy profit taking, leading stocks today managed to add fractions to a point or so to Wednesday's bulge with many posting new highs for the year.

While Wall Street still argued as to just how much rallying stimulation was derived from the Wisconsin primaries, most seemed to believe that signs of a turn-about in business and industry had much to do with reviving speculative and investment buying.

Bonds emulated stocks. Commodities steadied after early irregularity. European securities markets were mixed. The British "free" pound sterling moved up moderately in terms of the dollar.

Prominent stocks on the forward push — some eventually backed away—were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Lockheed, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, American Smelting, Westinghouse, Montgomery Ward and Eastman Kodak.

Loft was under water the greater part of the time. Oils and utilities held to a slim groove.

Lifted as much as 2 points in the curb were aluminum of America, Eureka Pipe, and Bath Iron. Phoenix securities lagged, along with Lake Shore Mines.

Ability of rail shares to step into the procession was encouraging.

Big receipts of gold from abroad lately, apparently for use in augmenting allied war purchases here, was seen as a bullish straw in the market wind.

SEN. GUFFEY PROPOSES MILK CONTROL LAWS

Would Seek Regulation of Inter-State Shipment.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 4—Senator Guffey (D-Pa.) proposed today legislation to make unlawful the interstate shipment of milk and milk products when the shipment is designed to evade state milk regulating laws.

"State milk control laws," Guffey said in a statement, "have failed to benefit milk producers because milk dealers now go long distances to buy milk at prices lower than those prevailing in the state where the milk is to be consumed and where a milk control board functions.

"Dairy farmers in both states lose—one by taking a price far below production costs and the other by having a fictitious surplus set up in their markets which prevents the sale of their milk except at the low price of the imported milk....

"Cheap milk purchased in areas where there is little or no sanitary dairy requirements is steadily imported into states where quality sanitation is required."

The Stars Say—

For Friday April 5

A lively day with probably sudden excitement and quite unpredictable occurrences is presaged from a very interesting chain of planetary aspects. This state of affairs is likely to operate in the social domestic or emotional life probably the latter and may bring a spectacular courtship or marriage. Elopements come under this influence. While there is sign of pleasure and definite benefits there also are omens of entanglements intrigues or angles sinister and treacherous.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of sudden and unusual developments probably in the personal life social domestic or romantic. Something surprising or perplexing and dramatic may occur possibly an elopement. While there may be joy, thrills and sensationalism in this, there also are sinister omens of ill advised arrangements, complications or distressing intrigues. Also extreme vigilance and caution all may be as happy as the proverbial wedding bell.

A child born on this day although clever, good natured and well meaning may be carried away by its romanticism or impressionable temperament and be duped or misled by sinister influences or designing associates.

Federal Movie Reveals How Counterfeiters Operate

1. Professional money-passers usually work in pairs. These two have stopped their car near a grocery store where a passing job will be attempted. The fellow in the driver's seat is taking a genuine $10 bill from a flashlight cylinder used to conceal a roll of counterfeits. His companion will attempt to pass the bill.

2. The passer has presented the phoney $10 in payment for a small purchase. But the alert girl clerk suspects that the bill is spurious. She detains him under pretext of insufficient change in the cash register. She calls the manager to ask for change. The manager detects the counterfeit, phones the police.

3. A policeman arrives and takes the bogus-bill passer into custody. (The actual passer usually carries only one bogus bill into a store with him, so that if apprehended he may be able to persuade a policeman that he himself is an innocent victim of counterfeiting. A second policeman has advanced on the car outside.)

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON—The U. S. Secret Service has gone into movie production as part of a campaign to make counterfeiting "the most unprofitable racket in America."

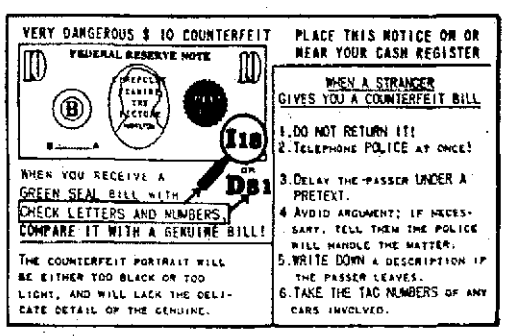

The famous governmental agency, which combats bogus-money passing, is presenting a picture called "Know Your Money." It will be shown in all sections of the country.

The movie aims to teach Americans, particularly trades-people, bank employes and other handlers of money, how to tell counterfeit bills and coins from the real stuff. The film also shows how an intended victim can help catch a fake money-passer. Leading roles, including those of victims and passers, are taken by secret service personnel.

Losses from counterfeiting, which reached a peak of $1,200,000 in 1937, droped to $365,000 in 1939. Officials attribute the big decline largely to an educational campaign in 1938 among money-handlers in New York where a high percentage of bogus currency was being circulated. The officials are confident the new nation-wide campaign will bring losses down to a negligible sum.

The small business man is the most common victim of the counterfeiter. It's much harder to pass bum bills in larger stores where they handle lots of money and are constantly on the watch for fake currency.

How To Know Counterfeit Money

The most effective way of telling whether a suspected bill is good or bad is to compare it with a genuine one of the same type and denomination.

First, observe carefully the portrait of the famous American on the bill. The genuine is lifelike, stands out from oval background which is a fine screen of regular lines. Notice particularly the eyes.

The portrait on the counterfeit is dull, smudgy or unnaturally white; scratchy; background is dark with irregular and broken lines.

Second, study the seal. On genuine bills, sawtooth points around the rim are identical and sharp. On counterfeit, sawtooth points are usually different, uneven, broken off.

Third, inspect the serial numbers. On genuine, they have distinctive style, are firmly and evenly printed; are of same color as seal. On counterfeit the style is apt to be different, poorly printed, badly spaced, uneven in appearance.

Fourth, inspect the paper. Good bills are printed on distinctive paper containing very small red and blue silk threads.

Rubbing a bill will not prove whether it is genuine or counterfeit; ink will rub off either.

New Way Found for Utilizing Wood Products Waste

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO—A new process of making wood coke may result in the development of steel and allied industries near the forest regions of the nation, the national farm chemurgic conference was told today.

The new process and its implications were discussed by John H. Gellert of the American Casting Service of Watertown, Wis. He said the process had been perfected by Dr. Stevan Ruzicka, a chemist of Belgrad, Yugoslavia.

Conversion of wood waste into a processed charcoal would provide a cheap fuel with a chemical composition necessary for the manufacture of high priced Swedish type steel, Gellert said.

"This process is peculiarly fitter for development in the northwest because it substitutes for coke made from coal, a processed charcoal made from wood waste, sawdust, tree tops and stumps of which the northwest has perhaps 50 million tons a year," Gellert said.

Quantity production of steel from wood coke in the United States has been impossible, Gellert declared, because commercial charcoal is too brittle and tends to pulverize under pressure in blast furnaces. This fault has been overcome by the Ruzicka process, Gellert added.

"Should the process prove as practical as some experts predict," the speaker continued, "it will form the basis for new electro-metallurgical and electro-chemical industries in the northwest, and provide a new and perhaps important use for wood waste."

Gellert said Wood coke's relative freedom from ash and its complete lack of sulphur and phosphorus may make it eligible for the production of calcium carbide, carborundum, and electrodes. Other possible uses were listed as: blast furnace fuel for production of high grade iron, cupola melting of so-called high test irons, electro-furnace reducing agent for production of ferro-alloys, duplexing of cupola and side blow convertor in making high grade steel, fuel for production of high-alumnia cement, smokeless domestic fuel.

Gellert said the estimated cost of coal coke used in the production of a ton of pig iron was $2.51, compared with $1.60 for the required amount of wood coke.

"These savings," he said, "are an important factor in the development of a steel industry on the west coast."

A transparent visor to be attached to ski caps by snap buttons has been invented that can be worn close to the face or over eyeglasses or turned up out of the way.

CALL DEFENSE WITNESSES IN CONTRIBUTIONS TRIAL

By The Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 4—One of the first defense witnesses at the trial of eight Pennsylvania Democrats charged with conspiring to force political contributions from state workers testified he received "rough" treatment in a grand jury room.

Another said his system of percentages for such contributions was patterned after the Republicans.

Both defendants, Wendell H. Morgenthaler, treasurer of the Dauphin county Democratic committee, and Frank R. Hean, committee officer manager before becoming secretary of the pardon board in September, 1937, denied they used threats to collect political contributions.

The reference to the jury room was made by Morgenthaler in explaining minor alterations in his trial testimony and that given in the winter of 1938-39 before the grand jury which investigated 1936 campaign charges, out of which the trial grew.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBER IS FOUND FROZEN

Huddled Body Discovered on Mt. Hood by Searchers.

By The Associated Press

MOUNT HOOD, Ore., April 4—A four-day search of the crevice-riven blizzard-swept flanks of Mount Hood ended last night with discovery of the huddled, frozen body of Gerald Herrmann 28, of Milwaukee, Ore.

The treacherous peak spared Herrmann's fellow climber, James Lorentz, 19, of Oregon City, who was discovered Tuesday. He was found stumbling aimlessly in timbered Paradise park, frost-bitten, snow-blinded and exhausted.

Herrmann apparently died at the spot on the 8,000-foot level where he had halted Sunday afternoon to rest. He was crouched as if trying to ward off snow and wind. In his notebook was the final entry:

"8:30: 14 degrees above."

The body was nearly covered by snow and a new storm was brewing to obscure vision when it was sighted by two men of the Mt. Hood ski patrol, famed rescue organization of climbers and skiers.

Lorentz was found at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday. The young climber said he left Herrmann Sunday afternoon.

"He was too tired to go on," he told rescuers. "He sat down in the snow. I put both our knapsacks and snowshoes around him as a windbreak."

Doctors Support Home Remedy for Hay Fever Cure

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

CLEVELAND, April 4—People who said they helped their hay fever by eating clover honey in the spring and chewing ragweed leaves in the summer received medical justification today at the American College of Physicians.

This curious legend was investigated by the allergy clinic of the University hospitals of Cleveland, with the result that eating pollen was tried as a medical remedy and found quite effective.

One hundred and thirty hay fever victims acted as the guinea pigs. About half of them took injections of the ragweed pollen, which is a standard method of relieving hay fever, while the other half swallowed capsules filled with the same pollen.

As a result 63 per cent of the pollen eaters were helped considerably, 24 per cent had fair relief and 13 per cent were not relieved at all. This was almost as good as the results of the regular vaccination method, where 70 per cent experienced considerable relief, 19 fair and 11 none.

The capsule method had one advantage. It was easy to take a capsule every day or two, whereas the vaccination requires going to the doctor or the hospital to be scratched with a needle anywhere from 15 to 30 times.

The clinic physicians said there is still a medical controversy over the pollen-eating method, less than a dozen physicians having tested the method.

When taken in a capsule, one hundred times as much pollen must be given as by hypodermic needle. However, even the 100 times multiplication only fills a pill that is small enough to swallow easily.

REPORT IS PREPARED ON MINE EXPLOSION

Board May Call for More Information on Blast.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—Industrial relations department officials today began preparing a report on the two-week investigation of the March 16 Willow Grove coal mine explosion which killed 78 men.

George A. Strain, state industrial relations director, said it might be necessary to call upon mine inspectors for additional information to complete the record.

Strain will submit his report of the disaster and his findings to Gov. Bricker and said he "may make certain recommendations."

R. L. Ireland Jr., president of the Hanna Coal Co. which owns the Willow Grove mine near St. Clairsville, said that the "great extent of the explosion" was the result of coal dust set off by an earlier explosion.

The original blast seemed to center at the powder box, Ireland said, but he could not give an opinion as to what set off the powder.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acid and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Revelations

WHILE Germany threatens to fire the other barrel and Ambassador Bullitt, apparently designated as the chief target, tries to remember what he didn't say that might be construed as a violation of neutrality, old memories are stirring.

In 1919, when Mr. Bullitt was a liaison official with the American peace mission to Paris, he was a party to a number of highly confidential conversations. In testimony before the senate foreign relations committee in the fall of that year, he related certain impressions which were at variance with official versions and found himself in hot water up to his neck.

Meanwhile, he had resigned from the peace mission in protest against the peace treaty. He told senators that Secretary of State Lansing, himself, deplored the treaty. Only President Wilson's intervention kept Lansing from issuing a public contradiction. The sensation caused by the young Philadelphian's "revelations" cut short a promising career in diplomacy; his reinstatement by the Roosevelt administration as a domestic official in 1933, later as an ambassador, first to Russia, then to France, was construed as vindication of his position in 1919.

Ironically, the official who dared to criticize the peace treaty in 1919 now becomes the chief target of "revelations" by the country which agreed with him.

Coaxable

NO UNUSUAL insight is needed to see that the political strategy of John L. Lewis is to remain coaxable this year. It takes insight, however, to understand what he has in mind if he doesn't get coaxed.

He might make good his threat to rally minorities under a third party banner, but it's not probable. Three things are against it.

There aren't any unclaimed minorities to be rallied; both major parties are working that side of the street already.

Mr. Lewis, himself, is the leader of a minority within the minority of organized labor, which never yet has voted compactly and is even less likely to vote as a unit this year when it is divided into factions.

Third party movements in national politics are useful for spiting the other fellow but are otherwise ineffectual; none of the minorities Mr. Lewis might lead are interested in cutting off their noses to spite their faces.

Mr. Lewis says he doesn't trust the Republicans and is dubious about the Democrats. Apparently, it's a mutual feeling. Mr. Lewis seems to have maneuvered himself out to the end of a limb.

Contraband

IN LINE with the rule that anything which might be useful to the enemy is contraband, the British have been looking for Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, the man who does tricks with money.

Next to the rumored secret device with which Germany is said to be able to stop internal combustion engines by remote control, a man who can do tricks with money is the world's most valuable military asset.

Fact of the matter is, when the financial effect of the last war is remembered, there's really nothing else that matters half so much as being able to make two dollars grow where no dollars grew before.

Due largely to Dr. Schacht, lately reduced to relative obscurity, Germany pulled through the most disastrous of all inflations and cooked up enough financial porridge to ready it for another crack at the European heavyweight title. The British can't be blamed for putting him on the contraband list.

Genius: Killed in Action

REPORTING on the Rockefeller Foundation's work for 1939, President Raymond D. Fosdick deplores the effect of war on research and looks gloomily into the future. "The mortgage which war places upon the economic resources of a country," he says, "is as nothing compared with the mortgage levied upon its future intellectual and cultural life... the sacrifices and the processes of integration have already begun."

While in Great Britain and France some research workers are being spared from military duty, thanks to the grim lesson taught by the World war when geniuses were killed in action by the score, the prospect is discouraging. America has cause for concern, too, explains Mr. Fosdick. "If, as a result of the present cataclysm on the other side of the Atlantic, Europe freezes into an arctic night, we shall not easily keep the fires lit in the universities and laboratories of America." It is pointed out that development and application of sulfanilamide was the result of a discovery in Germany, continued in France, carried on later in Great Britain and the United States. "Ideas are starved when they are fenced in behind frontiers," Dr. Fosdick explains.

His reminder of the disastrous cost of war in a field where money measurements cannot be used must be added to the crushing fiscal burdens being piled on the world by a war no one wants, but which no one knows how to avert.

News Behind the News

Capital Puzzled About Who Will Be John L. Lewis' "Third Party."

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 4—What puzzles the politicos about John Lewis third party is who is going to be the party of the second, third and ensuing parts.

It is not going to be his vice president, Mr. Sidney Hillman, of the C.I.O. associate, Emil Rieve of the hosiery workers. They are both for Mr. Roosevelt and a third term. It is not going to be the Illinois C.I.O. organization, or the other C.I.O. state groups which have pledged themselves to Mr. Roosevelt. It is not going to be Mr. Lewis' avowed candidate, Senator Wheeler, who has publicly proclaimed his fill of third party movements.

LEWIS

According to the prospectus Mr. Lewis offered, it might be the national youth administration most of whom have not yet reached voting age. It might be the Negro political organizations, but Mr. Lewis said they can't pay the $1 poll tax to vote. It could be the Townsendites. The last C.I.O. convention came out for $100 a month pension. But it won't be $100 a month is not very much and anyway the Townsenditey are stalking bigger game.

This leaves Mr. Lewis' threatened third party not only lacking a candidate but devoid of voters. In fact it even lacks an adequate explanation as to why Mr. Lewis wanted to threaten it.

In competent political quarters it is understood the Cyclone of the C.I.O. is bent on frightening Democrats into nominating someone acceptable to him. But he can't frighten very many people here until he gets a hole card higher than the deuce.

Another Flop?

The Lewis third party is, therefore, very likely to become a fitting climax to a highly unsuccessful political career. Father John started in politics in Pennsylvania, you will recall with pain, when his gubernatorial candidate lost in the primaries, and then when he switched to the Democratic nominee in the election, the Democrat also lost. His venture into Detroit with a slate for the city council ended with a recount when the slate finished at the bottom of the list. Not long ago he ran a lawyer for governor in Kentucky with equally sensational lack of success. But perhaps his greatest feat was his publication of a black list against 46 enemies in the last congressional election. 39 of whom won.

Lewis in Congress

The house labor committee apparently thought so too. Mr. Lewis and his national labor relations board were frozen out completely in the committee voting on amendments to the Wagner act.

Some committeemen thought they saw the frosty hands of the A.F. of L. and White House joined in the freezeout. It looked to them as if a deal had been made whereby Mr. Roosevelt won the point for a two-man enlargement of the board and the A.F. of L. was paid off for relaxing its demand for a fresh new five-man board, with the amendment requiring craft union (A.F. of L. type) elections on demand.

The appearances of the deal were certainly present, although A.F. of L. spokesmen say it just happened that way. Apparently the White House did not work with exceptional ardor in behalf of the A.F. of L. amendment.

More About Bullitt

Whatever Ambassador Bullitt did or did not whisper to the Polish ambassador, as contended in Mr. Hitler's publication of the white book, he has been making some equally interesting current observations behind his hand to congressmen.

They quote him as taking a very pessimistic view of the war ... While the new French premier, Reynaud, is committed to energetic belligerency, there is no opening through which he can strike successfully at Germany, and when the French people discover this their discouragement is apt to make itself felt ...There will be no direct assault on the Siegfried line and there is not much else Reynaud can do... British public opinion already is becoming increasingly discouraged. An inconceivable increase in air armament would be necessary for an attack on Germany... Germany is in the same stalemated situation, which, therefore, seems likely to lead to steady and perhaps disastrous attrition on both sides.

Weatherman's Headache

That's What War and Its Secrecy Means to U. S. Forecasters.

By JACK STINNETT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Mark Twain said nobody ever did anything about the weather—but the Allies have.

They've done their best to knock the weather forecast into an unintelligible African mumbo-jumbo; to make clear, bright days pop up when storms were in the offing; to melt away fogs unexpectedly; and to get General Mud to fight on their side without even warning the Nazis whose colors he is carrying.

So far, the only effect of all this on Old Doc Weatherman in the United States has been to give him a few headaches and pains in the neck. With all his assistants from far Pacific to mid-Atlantic, he's still able to take the pulse of today's weather in the U. S. A. and tell you that the situation will be tomorrow: Hot or cold, rain or shine, or fair and warmer.

Jack Stinnett

Somehow, the world's weather has gotten to be almost as important a factor in the war in Europe as how to finance the fighting, or which way the neutrals are turning, or who's going to get what axis next.

If you don't think so, saunter over to the old red brick chateau, stables and carriage houses that are the home of America's No. 1 weather bureau and nose around a bit.

Coast Guard Patrol

Up in New York, Boston, Portland, Me., fellows are haunting the docks, sidling up to mates and captains and saying (a little more subtly than this): "Hey, Pal, how about some weather reports?" Meaning, of course, when they get out to sea, will they please send back some information.

The skipper of one of the big Scandinavian liners was so approached the other day and his answer was: "Well, maybe, until about Cape Race, but when I've cleared there, nothing doing. Think I want to get held for violating neutrality by giving information (indirectly) to an enemy?"

Far out to sea, about a third and two-thirds of the distance between Bermuda and Horta, two coast guard boats are constantly taking weather readings, on deck and in the skies (with balloons) and four times a day broadcasting them to the world.

From certain Canadian points come coded messages giving information the United States has agreed not to use for any purpose other than working out its own forecasts.

The Alaskan weather stations have multiplied in importance. Efforts are being made to keep the Siberian and other Soviet stations broadcasting regularly. Japan's trickily coded messages are used like those of Canada, secretly and only for completing the U. S. weather map.

Weatherman Is Accurate

I could go on endlessly: About the coast guard ice patrol, which radios weather back from beyond Newfoundland, from which no weather ever comes any more; about the broadcasts from Greenland and Iceland; from Horta and Lisbon; from Rome, which may be on the axis but still has ships at sea to worry about and can't bother if the Allies do get this important information; and about the great blank spot on the world weather map that stretches west from Russia across most of Canada.

In spite of that pain in the neck and the additional expense, it hasn't impaired Old Doc Weatherman's accuracy much ... probably less than 2 per cent, maybe not even one.

As to how much all this hullabaloo over weather has helped the Allies, experts here can only guess. In the closing months of the World war, its importance was recognized generally, but in those days, the Allies had the U. S. and its weather information on their side. It's conceded now that from what the Germans know and what leaks through, they are able to box out a weather map that may be fairly accurate.

But it's conceded also that weather fights on the Allied side. It moves, generally speaking, from west to east. If the British could move in on the Nazis the way their weather does, the war would be over tomorrow.

"POLITICAL SURVEY OF THE WEEK"

On The Record

Neutrality on U. S. Ships Seems To Mean Obeying Belligerents' Rules.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

ON BOARD S. S. MANHATTAN —On an American ship one realizes what neutrality means in the warring world of 1940. This ship is American territory, but once away from our own coast we live on the terms of one or another of the belligerents.

We are not making for the usual peace-time Atlantic ports because the waters are infested with German-laid mines and German submarines. Inferentially we admit the right of the Germans to sink our ships on sight and drown every one on board. We admit it by avoiding the issue.

We have a cargo of copper, oil and lots of other things, among them needles and thread. It is consigned to Genoa. But the Americans who shipped the material cannot sell it wherever they wish. Much of the cargo is shipped under "navicerts" — naval certificates issued by the British guaranteeing that the goods will not go to Germany. At Gibraltar this morning the British came on board and looked over all the cargo "manifests." Were we carrying contraband likely to get to Germany we would be forced into a British port and there compelled to unload it. Every pound of copper and drop of oil transported on this ship will be traced by the British after it is unloaded. If its destination is not neutral or Allied territory, the skipper and consignee will go on a British black list, and no American ship will care to carry cargo from that source again, for to carry it will mean expense and delay.

Dorothy Thompson

Question Germans

British officials this morning questioned all our German passengers, mostly elderly women returning from visits to children in America. The American-born wife of a German going to join him came in for some fairly careful questioning about her political views. She was quiet and non-committal. The officials were pleasant, found nobody suspicious and treated the Germans and the ogling passengers with great courtesy. But at Gibraltar we unloaded all mail destined for Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia. All of it will be gone over and opened by the British censors. If there is money in it it will be removed, and letters will be searched for espionage information and for bills of lading of "front" organizations set up to escape the embargo. Thus, by rifling the American mails, have the British helped to compile their black lists of "enemy" firms operating from the United States.

A French submarine was right alongside of us as we hove to at Gibraltar, that barren rock that is Britain's most valuable bit of real estate. A bystander said wryly, "If the commander of that sub should tell us to get off in ten minutes because he was going to sink the ship, I suppose we'd obey!"

No Grounds

We have no sound or logical ground for protesting the right of the Allies to superintend and control every needle and spool of American thread to a European friend.

These encounters with the British and French are repeated, whereas we have no annoying conflicts with the Germans. We have no conflicts with the Germans because the German method of enforcing an embargo is simply to send the ship with all on board to the bottom. So we stay entirely out of the range of that possibility and close not only the Allied, but all the neutral ports of Scandinavia, Belgium and Holland to our ships.

Our trade as a whole is not suffering. On the contrary, with France buying ten times her normal quota of goods in the United States, with British buying increased and with a thriving market for our raw materials and manufactured goods in all the neutral countries, our trade is at a peak. But it is a curious thing to realize that our foreign trade is today controlled in one way or another by warring powers.

The Germans have complained bitterly since 1918 that they were betrayed by Woodrow Wilson's Fourteen Points. One of these points was "The freedom of the seas in war as in peace." Freedom of the seas in peace or in war was one of the things we fought the last war about. Well, we did not get it. Nobody took it away from us. They probably would have done so, but we did not wait to see, nor did we argue it. We abandoned the principle itself, in the neutrality act.

Art of Losing

Runyon Explains Two Ways of Dropping Dough on Horse Races.

By DAMON RUNYON

NOW that the art of losing money on the horse races is to be placed in reach of the general public in New York state, per the pari-mutuels, a discussion of the subject by one of great experience may be of interest to our readers.

There are two distinct schools of thought on the matter of losing money on horse races. One school bows firmly to scientific losing. The other school contends for a less rigorous method, perhaps best described as random losing.

Damon Runyon

The scientific system is involved, and the physical wear and tear and the overhead certainly exceed that of the random system. The scientific system begins with the acquisition of all the racing information available, such as form charts and tipster sheets.

A scientific loser may have an actual investment of upward of a few dollars before he even starts for the track, as it is agreed that the form charts should be gathered up the night before the races and past performances of the horses entered for the races of the next day carefully analyzed and earmarked. This analysis is technically known as handicapping, or "doping."

The scientific loser usually does his own "doping." In fact, that is where the science of scientific losing begins. We shall not dwell on the processes of "doping," because they concern such dry details as the distances of previous races run by a horse, weight carried, class of competition and conditions of the race in which it is run the next day, as for instance, "for horses that have been without bedding for two weeks," etc., etc.

WHEN you add to the price of the racing information, the cost of the electricity consumed by the scientific loser in sitting up nights "doping" the races, the lead pencils used in jotting down figures and the hard service to which the fabric of the seat of his trousers is put, necessitating frequent replacements, you can see that the system is expensive.

There is also the item of reading specs. Nearly all scientific losers use reading specs. Their eyes may be perfectly normal when they take up scientific losing as a career, and in fact may still be all right for all purposes, except reading. But their reading vision is soon impaired by the small print of the form chart. Scientific losers carry reading specs in the breast pockets of their coats, taking them out and putting them on whenever it is necessary to consult their charts again to see why an analysis went wrong.

As this is after every race, and as there are seven and eight races a day, six days a week, it will be seen the reading specs receive usage that demands numerous repairs, especially in the hands of scientific losers given to out-of-the-money palsy, which causes them to drop their specs on the cement floors of racing grandstands. This is a common affliction of scientific losers on seeing an analysis go wrong.

MANY scientific losers will occasionally depart from their own analysis in favor of last minute information brought them by fellow scientists, and conveyed in a whisper. An important feature of the science of scientific losing on the horse races is the whisper. In an uproar in which you can scarcely hear yourself think, one scientific loser would not dream of conveying information to another, save in a whisper.

The random system of losing money on the horse races is much less complex. The random loser may lose his money on the races and do a rhumba simultaneously, so negligible is the mental effort involved. The system calls for no study of the form charts, no information, no contemplation of any of the scientific phases of the science of losing. The random loser does not even need reading specs. He is better off if he cannot read at all.

IN PURSUING the random system, you just bet on as many of the horses in a race as your bankroll permits, favoring long shots. If you can bet on all the horses and take in the lead pony, too, so much the better. This is the random system of losing money on the horse races.

We may say in all modesty we have long been regarded as one of the leading exponents thereof. In fact, at one time a movement was on foot to give the system the official title of "The Runyon Spread," and to term the followers "Runyon Spreaders," but we deemed that too great an honor.

Curious thing about the two systems is that they both arrive at the same end and at about the same time. The only difference is that the scientific loser bets on horses that do not run scientifically while the random loser bets on the horses that do run at random.

Anecdotes of Ohio

By THOMAS W. MADDOX

Once a janitor in the Medical College of Ohio, John Richman performed the first Caesarian section operation in the United States in 1827 near Newton, once a Clinton county village.

Richman as a young man first got his inspiration to become a doctor when he was janitor and listened to lectures outside classrooms.

Since he had but little formal education, Richman's application for entrance to the school necessitated a special permission by Medical College of Ohio trustees. After graduation he practiced in southern Ohio.

He performed the Caesarian operation upon a Clinton county Negro woman. In a one-room log cabin, virtually dark except for flickering candle light, Dr. Richman saved a baby's life by the successful operation atop a bare board table, without anesthesia or antiseptics.

Substitute for Iron

By International News Service

BERLIN—Artificial fibre to replace iron.

This new German invention has caused a sensation in the Reich's iron industries. According to official information, it is the so called Fe-Ce-Fibre, which is made out of coal and chalk, two raw materials which Germany possesses in unlimited quantities.

The chemical-physical properties of the Fe-Ce-Fibre make it completely waterproof, unaffected by alkali, acid or any other chemicals. The fibre is said to resist decomposition, does not burn while the tensile strength of the fibre is even higher than that of steel.

The fibre will be used prominently to replace iron rods hitherto used in iron-concrete.

because the quota system imposed [illegible] students by American [illegible] schools has made it impossible for them to get an education in their own country. We have our modified version of Hitler's racial laws, only they are enforced by the state but in a silent and unpublicized manner in the so-called free universities.

These young men, who have completed anywhere from one to three years of their courses in the Swiss universities, came home for vacation last summer. Now they have been refused their passports to return. Great Britain is willing to have them but our department of state will not allow them to return to a belligerent country. Nor—according to the story of the group on this ship—was is possible for them to find a place for themselves in any of the eighty-six medical colleges of the United States. The more enterprising of them have set out for Switzerland with a view to continuing their studies in Lausanne, but the prospect dismays them because no one of them speaks French, and to resume a medical education in the middle of a completely foreign language is a hard test.

FLOWERS and tapers in pastel shades decorated tables arranged for the guest day dinner at which members of the Three Arts club were hostesses last evening at Hotel Harding. Places were marked with miniature parasols and flowers, carrying out a theme of "April Showers and May Flowers" and favors were pastel flower pots holding baby bears.

Mrs. Clarence Weber, club president, welcomed the guests and Mrs. J. A. Lott, president of the Marion County Federation of Women's clubs and a member of the club, extended greetings from the federation. Fred K. Dix of Prospect was the guest speaker, and Robert Dillinger the guest pianist. Mr. Dix read from his "Poems of Nature," "Children's Poems," "Boyhood Poems," "Sonnets" and "Miscellaneous Poems." Mr. Dillinger presented two groups of piano numbers. His first included "Parsinoti Prelude," Pickhardt, and "Intermezzo," Kramer, and his second "Liebestraum," Listt, and "Spanish Dance No. 5," Grandos.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Dix of Prospect, Mrs. C. R. Baber and Mrs. Clare Mershon of Columbus, Mrs. Myrtle Bradt, Mrs. C. R. Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Spencer Anxious to Learn How Intruders Got Into House.

LILLIAN was canny enough to answer my father's ironical query as if it were meant seriously.

"Of course we know, Chief," she said deferentially. "That no one can keep you prisoner if you wish to leave here. But we are all so afraid that in your present condition of health you might be seriously injured by a whiff of that tear gas, and we are begging you not to go out of this room until Dicky and Harry have sounded the 'all clear' signal."

"I have no intention of going out of the room," my father said testily. "But I would like to know how long I shall have to stay here."

"It ought not to be long now," Lillian answered soothingly. "You see, the men under Dicky and Harry broke the windows in the attic when they tossed in the tear bombs. With the windows open, it ought not to take long for the gas to clear out of there. Of course, there's a little in this lower hall, but the windows are wide open and it ought to be cleared up soon. Just a minute—I'll get a line on it."

Needless Panic

She went to the door and called out a melodious "Yo-ho, Harry." There was silence for almost a second, and then her husband's voice sounded from outside the door.

"What's wanted, Lil? You were lucky to get me. We were halfway downstairs with those birds."

I interposed a panicky question:

"Dicky's not alone with them, is he?"

"Not a chance," Harry said cheerily. "Two of the guards are playing along. But what's wanted here?"

Lillian waited for the fraction of a second before speaking, evidently to give my father a chance to voice his wishes. But he kept silent, and at last she answered her husband's question.

Anyone Missing?

"The Chief is anxious to get out of here, but he has promised to yield to our wishes that he remain inside this room until every vestige of the gas is cleared out of the hall. So will you please come back and tell us the minute it is safe for him to leave?"

"Sure thing," her husband agreed. "And it won't be long now. It's emptying itself by the yard. But there's one thing we want to know. Is there anybody who might be wandering around and get a cough out of this?"

I had a sudden, panicky hunch. "Oh! be quick!" I adjured him. "We notified everybody to stay inside their rooms until further notice, but Dicky's mother was asleep, so we said nothing to her."

"Don't worry!" he said comfortingly. "She hasn't come out here yet, so I'll flag Dicky immediately and have him tell her to stay put. Anything else?"

Old Blue Book

"Yes," my father said promptly. "There's a pile of large old books on the bottom shelf of the bookshelf in my room. Will you bring me the one with the blue cover, please? You can't miss it."

"I'll have it back as soon as I've got these birds safely caged downstairs," Harry answered. "And by that time the gas ought to be out of here. So long!"

I did not realize that I was watching my father with anxiety until he smiled at me reassuringly.

"Don't be uneasy!" he said. "I promise I'm not going to be an ogre about this. But I must get at the bottom of what all this means. By the way, Margaret, haven't you a telephone extension in your room here?"

"Yes, I have," I said. "Would you like to use it?"

"If you please," he said and walked over to the small table upon which the telephone rested. After looking at the local directory, he gave a number which made Lillian give a meaningful glance at me. I recognized it as that of the old real estate dealer who had sold the farm to my father.

Hayes on Sick List Again

CHICAGO, April 4—Jackie Hayes, Chicago White Sox second baseman whose leg ailment last year forced him to undergo frequent examinations, is making the rounds again—this time because of an inflamed eye. Dr. George J. Musgrave said after an examination yesterday that the inflammation might be due to an infection elsewhere in Hayes' system. So Hayes was down for further examinations today.

Young Hurlers Key To Success for Red Sox

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor AP Feature Service

WOODY RICH

CHARLES WAGNER

HERBIE HASH

CHARLESTON, S. C.—There's a lot of chatter around the exhibition circuit about rookie Dominic DiMaggio, sophomore slugger Ted Williams and the veterans Lefty Grove and Jimmy Foxx of the Red Sox but Manager Joe Cronin is more interested in other chaps you don't hear so much about.

Cronin has no doubts about the four above mentioned. He figures DiMaggio is going to be one of the top rookies of the year. He's willing to bet that Grove and Foxx will be as good as they were last year and that Williams will be even better.

But these four can be stars and Cronin, Doerr, Tabor and Cramer can have exceptionally good years and still the Red Sox won't finish better than second. The lads with whom Joe is working overtime are the young pitchers. That's where the Yankees have the edge on Boston—pitching.

Cronin plans to carry 10 or 11 pitchers. Six of these will be the so-called regulars—Grove, Wilson, Denny Galehouse and the relief hurlers, Emerson Dickman and Joe Heving. The other five of the staff—to be chosen from among the eight recruit twirlers in the camp—are the ones who'll likely make or break the Sox.

Needs Real Pitching

Figuring that his power and his defensive strength is enough to challenge New York, Cronin knows that he must get exceptional results from these young hurlers if the Sox are to be challengers.

Here are these rookies on whom Boston's hopes rest:

Jim Bagby, Little Rock, won 7 lost 6.

Ted Olson, Louisville, 12 and 10.

Charles Wagner, Louisville, 10 and 11.

Woody Rich, Louisville, 2 and 2.

Frank Dasso, Scranton, 4 and 3.

Herb Hash, Minneapolis, 22 and 6.

Wilburn Butland, Minneapolis, 19 and 10.

Mickey Harris, Scranton, 17 and 4.

Bagby, Rich and Wagner have had trials with Boston before. Bagby, son of Cleveland's former star twirler, was one of the rookie aces of 1933 but bumped into trouble last year and, with a 5 and 5 record, was sent back to Louisville. Cronin is pleased with his work this spring. "He looks better than he ever did. I think he's going to help us," he said.

Woody Rich was the youngster who started with such a bang early last year and then was stopped by a sore arm. When his arm began to get better Rich was afraid to throw with his old time power for fear of hurting it again. He finished with Louisville and Cronin thinks he'll be ready for action again.

Hash A Standout

Wagner won 3 and lost 1 for the Sox during a short stay with the club last year. Cronin is giving Harris a good trial but it is quite a jump from Scranton to Boston and he may need more seasoning. Harris led the Eastern league in wins and in strikeouts.

Hash is one of the better prospects. He was voted the second most valuable player in the American association. He's a big 6 foot 1 right hander who has good control and a speedy fast ball. Hash had George Lacy as his catcher at the University of Richmond, again last year at Minneapolis and now Lacy is also with the Sox. He may be a valuable addition to the Boston catching corps.

Butland is the tallest man on the squad, reaching up 5 inches above six feet but weighing only 185. He is only 21 but has been pitching since he was 17.

If Cronin can develop a couple of stars and another trio of average hurlers out of his gang of youngsters the Red Sox are liable to be tough, indeed.

SUNNY JIM GROOMS 8 DERBY HOPEFULS

Famed Trainer May Pull Winner Out of Hat.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 4—Taking it by and large, there apparently isn't another three-year-old Johnstown, Gallant Fox or Omaha kicking around in the hay of Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' barns these spring mornings.

But that's not saying Mr. Fitz won't be in there pitching with a chance to pull one out of the hat again come Derby day.

The little man who's usually there or thereabouts when they start the run for the roses at Churchill Downs has a total of eight eligibles for the May 4 outing getting ready now at the stables of William Woodward (Belair) and Mrs. H. C. Phipps (Wheatley) out at Aqueduct race track. Not one of these—five for Belair and three for Wheatley—is rated more than an outside shot to grab the brass ring against Bimelech, Andy K. & Co.

Yet Mr. Fitz beams that smile on you and assures you he's not worrying.

Training Camp Briefs

By The Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Tex.—Two temporarily managerless baseball clubs, the Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates, opened an eight-game touring series here today. Jimmy Dykes of the Sox went to Philadelphia, where his wife is ill, and Frank Frisch rushed to Wichita, Kan., for treatment of a cold that settled in his throat.

Feller vs. Hubbell

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Bob Feller against Carl Hubbell, the pitching show for which the customers in Waycross, Ga., chanted intermittently yesterday, was to be presented here today as the Cleveland Indians and New York Giants resumed their battling. The Indians triumphed yesterday, but lost the services of Pitcher Willis Hudlin for few days after a smash by Ben Chapman in batting practice struck his leg.

To Get Real Workouts

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—Cincinnati Reds pitchers will stick in the exhibitions for the full nine innings hereafter, if they can take it. Manager Bill McKechnie decided to discard the five-inning routine today in sending Big Paul Derringer against the Boston Red Sox.

Pearson Hot

TULSA, Okla.—The New York Yankees appear to be in first rate shape as far as their pitching—or for that matter, all departments—is concerned.

Monte Pearson came along yesterday and hurled five perfect innings of no-hit, no-run, no man to first baseball. And he hit a two-run homer, too!

Tigers In Good Shape

GADSDEN, Ala.—The Detroit Tigers, stopping off here to open a series with the Brooklyn Dodgers, appear in good physical condition generally, although Charley Gehringer was left behind to work out his back ailment. Trainer Denny Carroll says the club seldom has had fewer injuries and expects Gehringer to rejoin the squad before the Tigers reach Detroit.

BUCYRUS MEETS TIFFIN

BUCYRUS, April 4—Bucyrus high school track team will open its season Friday by entertaining the Tiffin Columbian team at Lane street field. Bucyrus' team has been training for several weeks and has spent four days this week in out door preparing for the opening events. Coach Eldon Armbrust is in charge of the team.

County Schools' Track Season Opens Tomorrow

Marion county's spring track schedule will open tomorrow afternoon at Prospect, with the host school, Waldo and Agosta competing in a triangular meet.

The session will launch competitive training leading up to the county relays and track meet. Prospect High's squad jumped the gun on other schools with a duel against the alumni early this week. The varsity won, 94-36.

The county relays will be held April 20, and the championship track meet May 11. Last year Prospect made a clean sweep of cinder path laurels by winning the high school and grade titles in both meetings.

Pairing of Wood and Sarazen Recalls Famed 1935 Finish

By The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 4—Perhaps by accident but more probably by well-conceived design, they sent Craig Wood and Gene Sarazen into today's opening round of the Masters golf tournament in the same foursome.

To start off with, it was one of the most colorful pairings in the entire list. Wood, the handsome blond bomber from Mamaroneck, N. Y., at 33, is playing the game as well as ever, and Sarazen, the squat, outspoken little gentleman farmer, also 33, is playing almost as well as he ever did.

But there was more behind it than that. It revived one of the best Merrivell finishes in the history of this or any other golf tournament — Sarazen's double-eagle on the 15th hole of the last round in the 1935 tournament, which enabled him to tie Wood for first place and go on to beat him in a playoff the next day.

Sarazen's shot ranks as one of the epic ones of the game—a 235-yard No. 4 wood that cleared the deep ditch in front of the green and popped into the hole.

Behind today's pairings, though, stood something else—a long line of similar finishes to tournaments in which Wood has looked like a winner only to be beaten either at the last moment or in a playoff. The last time was the U. S. open at Philadelphia last June, when it took two rounds for Byron Nelson to nose Wood has been playing of his best golf since then.

FROSH LEADS SCORERS

Strange as it seems, a freshman Bobby Demeen, led the Marquette basketball team in scoring, transferred to Marquette school after three years at yard, but he was ranked freshman.

CUT RATE ON "CENSUS"

Rogue Enumerators Reported in Cincinnati.

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, April 4 — Cut-rate "census enumerators" were reported at work in Cincinnati today and were immediately branded as spurious because they assertedly collected three cents from each person contacted.

Census Supervisor Joseph Timberman said two of his workers encountered difficulty in their districts when residents reported they "already answered" questions pertaining to the count and had paid the questioners at the rate of three cents for each member of the household.

Bonafide workers are paid four cents per head by the government.

CABINET BOOST FOR CHURCHILL

Steps Up to New Duties in Shakeup of Chamberlain Government.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, April 4 — Hard-hitting Winston Churchill climbed into the driver's seat of the British war machine today with a big share of the job of winning public confidence in the government's fighting qualities.

A new shakeup in Prime Minister Chamberlain's wartime cabinet puts the duties of chief war strategist on the shoulders of the first lord of the admiralty.

The shakeup answered clamor to "fight the war" but there still was skepticism whether the prime minister had succeeded in plugging all the gaps in the nation's fighting efforts.

Press reaction to the new cabinet setup ranged from the Daily Herald's brickbat, "futile," to the Times' more subtle comment that it "is not calculated, and perhaps was not intended, to arouse any great enthusiasm."

Same Old Cast

For the most part the new cast is the same as the old, only in different roles, and in several cases the changes were mere swaps.

The only new blood in the ministerial family is in the food ministry where Lord Woolton, an industrialist experienced in government trade and supply operations, succeeded Herbert S. Morrison.

The only minister missing from the new alignment is Lord Chatfield, who was squeezed out by the dissolution of the ministry for coordination of defense.

Primarily, Chamberlain achieved three reforms in the cabinet facelifting, noteworthy more for its change in governmental organization than in men. They were:

1. Endowing Churchill with almost unchallenged mastery over the fighting services as head of the armed services committee;

2. Putting Sir John Simon and Sir Kingsley Wood in almost the same catetory on the home fronts;

3. Cutting down the war cabinet from nine to eight ministers by cutting out the ministry for coordination of defense.

Sir John Has Big Job

The staggering task of presiding over the cabinet's economic policy committee fell to silver-haired Sir John, who as chancellor of the exchequer remains the chief of Great Britain's mighty offensive of pounds, shillings and pence.

Sir Kingsley, who left the air ministry to become lord privy seal, was made head of the home policy committee, director of the vital domestic problems of wartime, including food and agriculture.

In effect, these three veterans—65-year-old Churchill, 67-year-old Sir John and 59-year-old Sir Kingsley—will be an inner war cabinet. It will be up to them and the 71-year-old Chamberlain.

SEVEN-HOUR RAIN STORM ADDS TO FLOOD THREAT

By The Associated Press

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 4—A seven-hour rainstorm that struck the Susquehanna river valley on the heels of a devastating flood sent one of the stream's branches surging upward again today but federal and state forecasters said no new crisis was expected.

Accompanied by hail, the downpour temporarily halted rehabilitation along a 100-mile stretch.

The federal-state forecasting service announced that the precipitation may cause slight rises in the river but will not result in any "significant" change.

REPUBLICANS

great applause also given to Congressman Dudley White of Norwalk, aspirant to the U. S. senate nomination.

White's two opponents, Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland and Charles E. Wharton of Kenton, also spoke.

Pointedly loud applause also greeted R. R. Bangham of Wilmington, state finance director and one of seven candidates for the state auditor nomination.

Some delegates, fearing an "incident" because of the state central committee's indorsement of George M. Neffner of Columbus over Edward J. Hummel of Cincinnati for the secretary of state nomination, saw nothing unfavorable materialize.

Hummel, after speaking, bowed and spoke to Neffner on the platform, and the new secretary of state smilingly returned the greeting.

Dale Dunlon, Columbus attorney, announced his withdrawal from the race for congressman-at-large in the interest of party harmony. Remaining in the contest are the two incumbents, Reps. George H. Bender and L. L. Marshall of Cleveland, and Lowell Fess of Yellow Springs.

Keynoter Simpson outlined, in blunt terms, a recipe for Republican victory.

Accusing the Democratic national administration of failing "hopelessly" to achieve its objectives, he advised Republicans not to resurrect old party platforms but to offer a program based on an analysis of the people's needs and the failures and successes of the New Deal.

"Let us see how much of the New Deal can be salvaged and make an honest effort to salvage as much as possible," he said.

Simpson declared that the Republicans would win in November only by convincing "the American people that we are on the level with them and that our party is in sympathy with the legitimate hopes and aspirations of the plain American citizens."

Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade, introduced Taft as "an extraordinary man, well equipped for public life."

The senator said "we all admit that some of the measures that have been begun by the New Deal must be continued, but what is wrong with the New Deal is the spirit in which the laws are administered. It wants to meddle in everything."

He said it was the New Deal's policy to pass a law, then establish a bureau to administer it which goes "far beyond what congress intended."

The senator charged that the federal government had established an indirect control over state highway departments through its handling of road funds and that "they would like to run the schools."

"There's no more dangerous thing than control of schools by the federal government," he said.

Turning to foreign policy, the senator declared that "I believe at least 80 per cent of the American people are determined to stay out of European affairs."

"If President Roosevelt were re-elected or if anyone with the same ideas were elected, the country would develop the itch to run other people's affairs—that's the danger of the New Deal," he continued.

Of government regulation of business, Senator Taft declared, "if we are going to restore prosperity, it's a cinch we must encourage investment in new enterprises. The government is trying to run all capital investment.

"It tries to run every farm. It tells the farmers what to plant and what not to plant. In some cases it won't let the farmer grow enough corn to feed his own stock.

"It tries to run all labor, promoting unions whether men want them or not. It has interfered with employes organizing independent unions. It tries to run the states and it would like to run all localities."

BARKLEY CITES WAY TO KEEP DEBT DOWN

Declares President Can Order Decrease in Spending.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 4 — The administration's reciprocal trade program survived another major senate test today when the chamber defeated, 44 to 38, an amendment to require congressional approval of future trade agreements.

The amendment, sponsored by Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), would have subjected agreements to approval by a majority of both houses.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 4—Amid waning economy hopes, Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky said today that President Roosevelt could keep the national debt below the $45,000,000,000 limit even if congressional spending tops that figure.

"The President merely could order departments not to spend a percentage of their appropriations," Senator Barkley told reporters. "That practice has been followed in the past, and it also would eliminate the necessity for increasing the debt limit or raising new taxes this year."

The suggestion came at a moment when the riddled economy program faced a new bombardment in demands for a $500,000,000 boost in the budget recommendation for a billion dollar WPA fund. A house appropriations subcommittee called WPA Commissioner Harrington for questioning about relief needs.

Congressional agreement to a $500,000,000 relief increase would be a heavy blow to Mr. Roosevelt's budget estimates.

Despite pressure in some quarters for a big relief fund boost, the house subcommittee served notice that it had no intention of exceeding the budget estimate without a direct recommendation by the President—if then.

Rep. Cochran (D-Mo.), an advocate of a larger WPA appropriation, told the house recently that unless more money was provided, about 1,500,000 would be dropped from relief rolls before November.

The house met an hour earlier than usual today in an effort to complete action by nightfall on the $785,099,094 war department appropriation, carrying approximately $103,710,000 for new weapons, additional seacoast defenses and 57 more airplanes, the bill's total was $67,357,600 less than Mr. Roosevelt recommended and $65,474,151 below the army's funds for the current year.

In the senate leaders hoped for a quick vote on the bill extending the reciprocal trade program.

SPECULATION RENEWED ON FATE OF "BAD MEN"

By The Associated Press

TULSA, April 4—The shooting of a taxicab driver has renewed speculation as to whether Ted Cole and Ralph Roe, Oklahoma bad men, survived their sensational escape from Alcatraz in December, 1937. They generally were believed to have drowned in treacherous waters of San Francisco bay.

The cab driver, Don Calvin, said he recognized Cole from newspaper pictures as the robber who shot him last night. Calvin was kidnaped by three men, who fled in his car.

Tool Kit Stolen As Man Reports Another Theft

Police today had a double mystery on their hands following a theft last night which indirectly resulted from another theft.

The unusual case, as recounted by police, started about 8 p. m. when a pocketbook owned by Mrs. Ella Pfeiffer of 201 Silver street, a census taker, was stolen from an apartment building where she was enumerating the families that live there. Mrs. Pfeiffer said she had the purse, containing a small amount of money and a wrist watch valued at $35, when she went into the building and that it was missing when she started to leave.

Hearing of the theft, William Fisher, a tenant in the building, advised Mrs. Pfeiffer to report it to police and when Mrs. Pfeiffer explained that the keys to her car were in the purse he offered to drive her to the police station.

Parking the Fisher car at the rear of Hotel Harding, Mrs. Pfeiffer and Mr. Fisher went to the police station, made a report of the theft and started to return to the apartment building to attempt to unlock Mrs. Pfeiffer's car. In a few seconds they returned to the police station, however, to report that a kit of tools, valued at $30, had been stolen from Mr. Fisher's car while they were making the first report.

AWAIT FULL RETURNS IN WISCONSIN VOTING

By The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 4 — Belated returns from approximately 500 precincts in Wisconsin's presidential preference primary will decide whether the state delegations to the Republican and Democratic national conventions will be solidly behind Thomas E. Dewey and President Roosevelt.

Dewey was assured of 16 of the 24 Republican delegates — four elected at large and 12 chosen in the congressional districts. He also held what appeared to be safe margins for the remaining eight seats.

The two rival slates pledged to support President Roosevelt for a third term jointly controlled most of the 24 Democratic delegates elected last Tuesday but faced the possibility of relinquishing one or two district seats to Garner delegates.

The President, in returns from 2,491 of the state's 3,011 precincts, maintained a 3 to 1 lead over Vice President Garner in the direct preferential vote, but in the delegate contest Willis R. Donley of Menomonie, Garner supporter, was leading for one of the Ninth district seats. Another Garner candidate was in the running in the third district.

The leading Dewey and Vandenberg candidates drew a total of 301,863 votes in 2,500 precincts. In the 1936 Wisconsin primary the complete Republican vote totaled only 190,634.

Dewey's leading candidate had 188,215 votes and Senator Vandenberg's, 113,648.

ARMY STARTS PROBE OF FATAL PLANE CRASH

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 4 — Army air corps officials from Selfridge Field, Mich., today opened an investigation into the crash of a pursuit plane, killing Lieut. James W. Phelps Jr., 23, of Berwyn, Pa.

The ship, flying low because of yesterday's storm, rammed into a tree and the porch of a house as it crashed in flames on East 194th street in suburban Euclid.

The accident occurred when 18 planes of the 94th pursuit squadran were scattered by the storm after they took off for their home base. The ships had engaged in mock attack maneuvers here.

Five planes returned to Cleveland airport and the others landed in or near Canton and Minerva.

GAG ATTEMPT, REPLY OF PAPER TO FINES

Sees Challenge to Freedom of Press; Court Stay Granted.

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, April 4—The Post-Dispatch declared today its conviction of contempt of court was a challenge to freedom of the press and accepted the defy with the editorial assertion the newspaper "will not be gagged."

The editorial, signed by Publisher Joseph Pulitzer, was the newspaper's reply to Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe, who fined the Post-Dispatch $2,000 yesterday.

Pulitzer, namesake son of the newspaper's founder, asserted the bill of rights was "the real issue in this case" and stated:

"If a newspaper is to be gagged by being hailed into court to answer a charge of contempt whenever a judge has felt the sting of editorial criticism, that means the end of the power of the press to tell the people about the failures and evils of their courts. That means the end of freedom of the press.

"The Post Dispatch will continue honestly, fairly and sincerely to criticize the courts."

Contempt citations against the paper—noted for its fight for progress and reform—and two of its employes were based on criticism in editorials and a cartoon of Judge Rowe's actions in the extortion trials of State Representative Edward M. Brady and a deposed labor union boss.

Its cartoonist, Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, and Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page, were fined and given short jail sentences, but were released on $500 bonds when the Missouri supreme court issued a "stop order" temporarily blocking enforcement of Judge Thomas J. Rowe's fine.

In addition the high court granted a writ of habeas corpus ordering two executives of the newspaper freed on bonds.

DIES

Some one in the audience shouted:

"Put him out of here; the dirty rat!"

Frankfeld walked from the room with a capitol policeman.

Smiling broadly outside, he told reporters he had been "thrown out."

Dies denied that he had ordered the witness ejected.

Miss Anne Burlak of Boston, administrative secretary of the Communist party in New England followed Frankfeld on the stand.

Frankfeld said the resolution he tried to present protested against the Dies committee's "unwarranted" search and seizure of records in Communist party headquarters at Boston.

Search Protested

Earlier in today's hearing Richard H. Lawry, suspended Pittsburgh census supervisor, testified that he did not have any connection with the Communist workers' school and asserted that any one who said he was was "a damned liar."

Vincent Johnson of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, who said he attended the Pittsburgh workers school for three months in 1938, testified that he saw Lawry there several times and read an extract from a diary he had kept which noted Lawry's presence at a meeting.

Johnson said that "revolution was taught" at the school which he described as an "adjunct and recruiting station for the Communist party."

Goering Appears To Mean Business in Threat of Blow

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Nazi Field Marshal Hermann Goering strikes me as meaning business when he declares that Hitler has "mobilized all resources" with the idea of delivering "a decisive blow" against the Anglo-French brotherhood in the western theater of war—when the time seems right.

I believe that, because such a move will be strategically logical—when the time seems right. In fact, it is the only logical move which one can figure out from the present position.

Goering's threat makes sense because if Hitler can't find a way to escape strangulation through the Anglo-French economic blockade, he is bound to try to fight his way out of the mess with the most effective weapon at hand.

England Likely Target

It seems highly probable that the Nazi chieftain will reserve this offensive—quite likely an onslaught on England with a huge fleet of bombing and fighting airplanes—for a real emergency. I don't believe he will employ it unless he can't see any way of extricating his neck from the garrote.

Nazidom has given no indication that it has abandoned its eager hope that peace will come through the intervention of some third party. It is safe to say that the Germans want to avoid a major offensive so long as there is hope either of settling the quarrel out of court, or finding a way of evading that devastating economic blockade.

However, to strike or not to strike is a matter which only Herr Hitler can decide. He has said that he believes he has been divinely ordained to carry out his program of the fatherland. So if one day he feels an irresistible impulse to strike, that will be the appointed hour for the blitzkrieg.

If that time comes, we shall see a very terrible affair. Let none doubt that a major offensive, either by land or by air, will turn western Europe into a flaming hell.

Why Advertise?

But why, if a blitzkrieg is intended, should Goering advertise it in advance?

The answer is that Goering was replying to the intensification of the allied economic offensive, announced in triumphant tones by British Premier Chamberlain in the house of commons. It couldn't be expected that Berlin would sit silent and suck its thumb while the allies broadcast the very substantial gains they have made recently in tightening the blockade.

Goering's announcement also was calculated as a warning to neutrals not to rush for the allied camp so fast that they will stub their toes. And, of course, it was a word of encouragement for the German public.

Democrats Told Roosevelt, Taft Will Head Tickets

By The Associated Press

DOVER, O., April 4—Rep. C. Arthur Anderson, Democrat of Missouri, told a group of leading Democrats here last night that most Washington politicians are predicting the presidential race will be between President Roosevelt and Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican of Ohio.

Anderson added some observers also believe Senator Vic Donahey, Democrat of Ohio, and Thomas A. Dewey, New York City prosecutor, will be the vice presidential contestants.

Predicting the President's re-election, the Missourian said "I see no reason why we should change horses in these turbulent times."

Four of the eight candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination spoke at the session, a banquet of the Tuscarawas county Jefferson club.

George White Speaks

The speakers were former Gov. George White of Marietta, former Rep. Harold G. Mosier of Cleveland, former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy of Cleveland, and James F. Flynn of Sandusky.

Others in the field are James R. Marker, Frank A. Dye and Herbert S. Duffy of Columbus, and former Gov. Davey of Kent.

Informed sources said it was unlikely that there would be any withdrawals from the race before today's deadline despite a comment at the banquet by Arthur L. Limbach of Dover, state Democratic executive committee chairman. He said:

"We may have something to say about that tomorrow (today)."

Kenneth B. Johnston, Columbus attorney, announced he would withdraw from the Democratic attorney general race in favor of George D. Nye of Waverly, former Pike county common pleas judge. Johnston said he considered Nye the strongest candidate" the Democrats could put up against Thomas J. Herbert, unopposed Republican incumbent.

The withdrawal leaves Nye opposed by Joseph C. Allen of Columbus; Charles Cavano of Cleveland; Joseph L. Hefferman of Columbus; and Edward Lamb of Toledo.

Kennedy Critical

Kennedy criticized "elder statesmen" of the party, declaring "they are not going to lead us to victory this fall by maneuvering a minority candidate and relying upon a coat-tail ride into state office with the national ticket. It is high time that the Democratic party of Ohio develop some new leadership."

While said he would conduct his campaign in the spirit of "good fellowship."

Flynn pledged his efforts "to speed up the state industrial commission" to the end "that complainants no longer will wait around the capitol building while members of the commission walk up and down the halls whiling the time away."

Mosier reiterated his plan for a campaign "to perpetuate democracy," asserting he would, if elected, "see that there is no Communist ticket in Ohio and that we have no Communist teachers in our schools."

KING APPOINTS NEW CANADIAN GOVERNOR

Member of British Royal Family Gets Post.

By The Associated Press

OTTAWA, April 4 — Canada acclaimed a member of the royal family, the Earl of Athlone, as its new governor-general today, appointed by King George VI to succeed the late Lord Tweedsmuir.

The dominion, partner-in-arms with the mother country in the European war, learned of the appointment of the tall, soldierly brother of Queen Mother Mary while Canada was being urged to do everything possible to win "the active support of the United States in the cause of the allies."

Gordon Conant, attorney general of Ontario, told an audience of farmers and business men yesterday that "no sacrifice on our part will be too great if that is accomplished."

Announcement of the appointment was made simultaneously last night here and in London in identical statements.

Because of wartime secrecy surrounding trans-Atlantic travel, the date of sailing for the new governor-general and his countess, Princess Alice, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria, was not announced.

Conant, speaking at Cannington, Ontario, warned that British-French success "may be very doubtful unless active participation of the United States is made effective at an early date."

Conant argued that a United States declaration for the allies now would show Germany what he called "the futility of her mad project" and, therefore, might bring an end to the struggle.

Of the recent speech by James H. R. Cromwell, United States minister to Canada, calling an allied victory necessary to the United States' welfare, Conant said it "expressed American opinion accurately" even though it was repudiated officially.

"The allies," he said, "need America. They need, and will be accorded, every support that this great northern part of the American continent can extend. But they need even more than moral and particularly the material resources of our great neighboring republic to the south.

"Every day the United States delays in joining the allies will only prolong the war and increase the effort and the sacrifice that the United States may yet be called upon to make to save herself from the fate that now threatens all the democracies of the world."

BATTISTA RULED GUILTY IN HUNTER SHOOTING

Canton Man To Appeal Geauga Conviction.

By The Associated Press

CHARDON, O., April 4—Counsel for Joseph Battista said today he would appeal the conviction of the 35-year-old Canton defendant on charges of shooting to kill Robert R. Fenwick, director of the Geauga county farm bureau.

Common Pleas Judge Harlan Sperry ruled Battista guilty after a three-day trial, but did not set a date for sentencing. The penalty is an indeterminate sentence of one to 20 years in Ohio penitentiary.

Fenwick identified Battista as the hunter who shot him last Armistice day. The defense presented numerous alibi witnesses who testified Battista was in Canton when Fenwick was shot by one of three hunters he ordered from his farm.

Rewards for solution of the case total $1,425, including $500 posted by Geauga county commissioners. Private Detective Elwood Smith, who brought about Battista's arrest as a result of his investigation at Lake Aquilla, is expected to get at least part of the money.

LITTLE SPITFIRE

By Jean Randall

If only this odd young man would go away, thought Brenda wearily.

CHAPTER ONE

The Shortest Street

BRENDA, dismissing her taxicab, gazed about her incredulously. This the shortest street, that enchanted scene of Aunt Anne's girlhood! It could not be!

And yet it was, of course. There it stretched, only one block long, closed on the south by a small park, on the north by a rusty iron fence behind which mouldered an old brick mansion, long deserted. Here were the three houses facing west, the seven smaller ones opposite which caught the morning sun. Ten homes...and Brenda knew by hearsay who lived in them all.

"But Dr. Wilson's has a conservatory, and the VanNess's a fountain, and there's an enormous block of pure marble with Burnham carved on it in front of our place—"

Her dismayed thoughts jolted to a sudden stop. Here was a block with Burnham on it indeed; but it was neither large nor of marble. It was a dingy thing of chipped cement, slewed rakishly sidewise perhaps by some skidding truck.

The girl's blue eyes traveled upward to the house where she expected to live for at least a year. Bewildered they identified this landmark and that, each specifically as Aunt Anne had mentioned, yet all so unbelievably small and shabby. The paint was peeling from the four porch pillars. The "great" bow windows upstairs were entirely unimpressive. The "formal planting of shrubbery" edging the walk from street to house was merely an unpruned mass of dusty green.

For a moment Brenda's heart failed her. She could not, she need not, climb the steps and ring the bell! No one had met her train in spite of the many letters Aunt Anne and Mrs. Rostetor had exchanged, or the telegram which heralded her actual arrival.

What neither aunt nor niece had realized was that more than twenty-five years had elapsed since the older woman had lived on the shortest street.

"I'll find a drugstore and telephone for a taxi," Brenda planned feverishly. "I'll go to a hotel until I discover the right sort of boardinghouse. Nothing will induce me to live in a neighborhood like this!"

But practical difficulties at once presented themselves. For instance, there was no drugstore in sight. The shortest street was a tiny island set in a sea of smart residences. And her trunk would arrive any minute. Besides...

The place sort of grew on you, the longer you looked at it, she admitted reluctantly. The window-panes all shone in the late afternoon sun. There was a friendliness about the way the yards—one could not call them lawns—ran into one another. And there was the VanNess's fountain, even if bone-dry; and the glassed-in alcove next door might turn out to be the glamorous "conservatory" of legendary fame.

Her hesitant ring at the bell brought no answer. She pressed the button again and with emphasis. The front door stood open and through the screen she saw the square hall where Aunt Anne had "received" at her debut. Silence now seemed to emanate from it.

She rang a third time, then applied small doubled fists to the frame of the screen. Patience was not a Burnham virtue.

A chair creaked protestingly somewhere above. Footsteps sounded, an annoyed masculine voice spoke from the landing.

"We're taking all the magazines we can possibly read. And we don't want the Magic Dishcloth, any sort of broom or mop, or books on the care of children."

"That is fortunate," replied the new arrival coolly, "since I have none of those things to offer. Will you come down, please, and let me in? Or shall I admit myself? I am Miss Burnham."

A Welcome of Sorts

THERE was a short silence, then an appalled voice ejaculated softly: "Merciful cats!"

Footsteps clattered down the rest of the steps and a coatless young man stood before her, his soft shirt open at the throat, his thick hair standing wildly on end.

"Come in, come in!" he urged, holding wide the door. "My most abject apologies! But why didn't you let us know you were coming today?"

Brenda exploded. She was hot, tired, and hungry. This was, or had been before it was sold, her ancestral home. She had a right to expect a welcome of sorts.

"'Us'! Who is 'us'? Mrs. Rostetor was notified by letter and by wire. What more does she expect?"

"Whew!" Her listener took an involuntary backward step. This was a small young fury; but a pretty fury! Even in anger a pair of dimples played about the corners of her mouth, and the glint of her blue eyes almost but not quite distracted him from the dark brows knitted above. He inquired soothingly:

"Can I get you a glass of cold water, or something? And won't you sit down?"

To her enraged astonishment she found her knees buckling beneath her. Sinking abjectly into the chair he pushed forward seemed a concession to this person who had no right to be here, let alone to welcome her to her own grandfather's house.

"Where," she demanded with some asperity, "is Mrs. Rostetor?"

"Gone to see a parade."

"But it's nearly 6 o'clock! Do they have parades all day in this town?"

He shook his head. "It was scheduled for 10 o'clock, but time means nothing to Adelaide. We'll be darned lucky if she's back for dinner."

"Adelaide?"

"Mrs. Rostetor. You mustn't mind the apparent disrespect. It's really a term of affection."

"Where are the servants? Do they also attend parades, and have no sense of time?"

"Servant. And yes, to both items of your query."

"Then who cooks dinner?"

He gave the matter some some thought. "Today, in all likelihood, Eric and Isobel and I. We'll treat you like company, seeing you've just come."

She sat back limply in her chair. This sounded like Bohemia. But to find it here in the stately Burnham house... perhaps she was more tired than she realized.

"Listen!" the young man adjured her anxiously. "You aren't going to faint, are you? You look mighty pale all of a sudden. I—I wouldn't know what to do if you did, you know," he babbled. "Couldn't you tell me? Don't you upend the patient, or roll him over a barrel, or something?"

She began to laugh helplessly, found to her horror that the laughter was turning into sobs, and felt herself caught up in a pair of strong arms and borne rapidly up the stairs to be deposited on a bed.

"Water next, I suppose," muttered a distracted voice. "But do I force it between the lips, or splash it in her face?"

"You dare!" She jerked herself upright and put her hands to her disordered hair. Her hat had fallen off and revealed babyish chestnut curls covering her small head. "It's because I had typhoid fever," she said, and wondered why she troubled to explain. "Is this my room?"

"I expect so. It's the only vacant one in the house so it must be, don't you think? But ought you to sit up? I could"—inspiration visited him swiftly—"I could get you a cup of hot tea in practically no time at all!"

"Iced," she urged. "Make it iced. What is the matter?"

"Nothing. That is, it's only your—er—dimples. They sort of twinkle when you talk, don't they?"

Two Fights Already

SHE sighed, having heard a good deal of comment on those dimples in the course of twenty years. Also they were continually defeating an earnestness of cherished purpose. No editor would take her seriously when she said she wanted to be a real reporter and be assigned to prize fights and murders. She had sold one story to a magazine but when in response to a summons she had presented herself at the office, the interview was a failure. She was perfectly sure she had been suspected of plagiarism. So she had come to this Midwest city where no one could send for her and where she intended to Pursue a Career. Fortunately dimples did not show on manuscripts.

When the iced tea arrived, she sipped it forgivingly. This odd young man, she supposed, was trying to be kind. If only he'd go away now and let her rest! But he straddled one of the straight-backed chairs and began to talk.

"I remember now there was a wire for Mrs. Rostetor this morning. I signed for it myself. I didn't know where to reach her so there was nothing I could do about it. Besides, I forgot it. It's been swell, having the house to myself all day. I can write, of course, against noise, but still—"

"Write," she frowned. She had had enough of fellow craftsmen in New York. They were always wanting to read her the new chapter, or a poem. "What do you write?"

"Advertising. Darned good stuff it is, too," he admitted modestly. "Sometimes my conscience hurts when I think how alluring I make the goods I write about."

"Oh—advertising!" She dismissed it airily. "I suppose I might as well know your name."

He rose so abruptly that his chair overturned.

"Do pardon me for existing!" he said with bitterness, and closed the door smartly behind him.

The heiress to all the Burnhams (there were just Aunt Anne and herself) now had a short but effective session with her own conscience. The result was a woebegone little figure Brenda could look more woebegone than anyone in the whole world), wandering about the upper hall in search of the person she had offended. Since she discovered only closed doors, she adopted the simple expedient of standing still and saying in a raised plaintiff voice:

"I'm sorry! I'm truly very sorry! I was abominably rude, and I do beg your pardon!"

"Skip it!" came a pacified growl from somewhere.

"But please come out. And—I'm asking most politely now!—please tell me your name. I can't —can I?—just go on calling you 'you.'"

"Call me Mac." He emerged and grinned at her sheepishly.

"But I'd like to know your whole name!" Brenda said.

"It's Dion Dale MacKelvey, but I was christened too young for me to do anything about it. Everybody calls me Mac."

She did penance far beyond her fault by letting the dimples have their way, and saying: "And I'm Brenda!"

"Brenda Burnham! A peach of a writing name!"

"Oh! How did you know?"

"You mean you are a writer? I didn't." He studied her closely. "I don't believe it. Or if you are, it's verse for children. About the kind moo cow that gives us sweet milk, the dear little kitty whose fur is like silk. I hope your sales are satisfactory?" he inquired with solicitude.

"You—you are impossible! I came out here to apologize to you; and you've insulted me. I haven't been in this house an hour and we've had two fights already. I w-wish I'd never come here! I w-wish I'd n-never l-left New York!"

The screen door slammed downstairs. A girl's voice trilled sweetly:

"Mac! Mac darlin'! Come down and help me get supper. I brought home a steak and some lettuce and—" The words trailed away toward the rear of the house.

Mr. MacKelvey said with formal courtesy: "I will call you when dinner is ready, Miss Burnham."

Miss Burnham replied with sweet distinctness: "That will be most kind of you, Mr. MacKelvey!"

Leap Before You Look

By Peggy O'More

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Look Before You Leap

"DONE it agin'," accused the toothless Abe, "losht your man thish time."

"My man?" echoed Tomi and shivered with something nearer ecstacy than cold. She savored the words. And he had gone to the mountains.

Tomi sped in his wake and arrived before the house just in time to see the tail lights of her own coupe give one malevolent wink before they disappeared.

"How can I catch him when he's in my car?" she wailed.

"Take hish," advised Abe, pounding up behind her.

But Bartell didn't leave keys in ignition sockets as Tomi did.

"Reckon he was sho exchited he forgosh it washn't hish no more," offered Abe."

The world dropped away from Tomi — "Abe, which are his mountains."

Abe didn't know. She could call a cab but by the time it reached the farm and turned back—"Abe," she said firmly, "you're going to have to drive after him."

"Not wishout my teesh!" stated Abe, stubbornly.

"Then back the fool thing out and I will."

Miraculously, Abe's car stayed in the road, benevolently it didn't break down on the bridge and when it reached Central Avenue, it was still going strong.

Tomi marveled at both the car and herself. She, Tomi Toland was running after a man and that man, of all men, was Allen Bartell. What she was going to do when she caught him she didn't know, she just didn't want him to get away from her...ever.

A traffic light bloomed red before her. Tomi pressed stockinged feet to brake and clutch. They didn't give. She stood up on them and the car, having slithered into the intersection came to a sudden, neck cracking stop.

The clutch and brake had given, and having given the clutch remained pressed to the floor boards. Horns sounded, traffic bells rang, a police whistle shrilled and Tomi went down under the wheel to work on the clutch with both hands.

It came up suddenly and she with it, her head contacting the wheel with emphasis. Earnestly she addressed the wheel in her native tongue and looked up to see a black moustached police officer watching and listening in rapt admiration.

"It's all right, Risso," offered the weary voice of Allen Bartell to the officer. "I'll get rid of her. Slide over," he ordered Tomi.

Tomi slid.

Under the silent ministration of Bartell, Abe's car gurgled, purred, gave a jump and went leaping across the intersection, the Bartell high hat smacking the roof with each leap, the Bartell brow growing darker and darker.

She'd have to make him talk.

"I should have asked that officer to arrest you for stealing my car," Tomi offered with spirit.

She Had To Leap

Bartell turned to give her an angry glance—"You could have asked but George and I went hunting in this car last fall. Besides, do you think any officer would take your word for anything looking the way you do?"

Tomi couldn't help it, she giggled—"I don't look like I'd come home with the milkman."

"—anyone with one grain of common sense would know better than to run around in wet clothes—"

"Isn't it th' truth?" agreed Tomi, happily. "He'd noticed she was still in her wet clothes. He'd noticed and he'd talked. And he was still in his clothes.

"There's your car," he was drawing up to the curb, "the heater's on. I was just returning it. I'll drive Abe's—"

If she let him go he'd go to his mountain before she'd... whatever it was she was going to do to hold him.

"I...I can't drive," she offered with sudden inspiration "my wrist," she dangled a wrist before him, "pulling the clutch up—"

Bartell looked at her suspiciously but he helped her out of one and into the other car with a certan gentleness.

Now, she decided as they rolled back along Central, she'd tell him.

But he only rolled the car two blocks before he turned into the curb again.

"Doctor Tillman's," he explained, starting to get out of the car, "your wrist—"

Doctor Tillman. Anyone but that doctor with an X-ray eye.

—"this is my final act as your guardian," Bartell was saying, "if you must leap before you look, you're going to have to find someone else to pick you out of the mess—"

Tomi's hands closed firmly on Bartell's coat tails.

"Allen," she pleaded. He'd said, leap...she'd have to. She'd have to leap into the darkness ahead of her without knowing what lay there, joy or humiliation.

He was looking back over his shoulder at her wrist, both of them.

"Allen I know, they...or it is all right. But I had to talk to you. Allen, you're right. I do leap before I look because if I didn't I'd never never dare ask you to marry me because if I did ask you and you said yes, think what an awful life we'd live."

Bartell folded his length back into the coupe, turned on the top light and stared at Tomi.

"Did I hear you say something about asking me to marry you?" he asked, incredulously.

Tomi nodded miserably. She'd made the leap and it was dark ahead—"If you should go to the mountains maybe I couldn't find you to ask you before leap year was over and—"

"But you hate me!"

'I've Been Looking'

"I know," agreed Tomi, solemnly, "but hating anyone as much as I've hated you takes a lot of thinking about until by now .. well I just can't face the future without having you to hate for wanting my farm and my frogs—"

"Frogs," snorted Bartell.

Tomi understood. "I know they don't like you, Allen, frogs are fussy but I'm not."

Bartell's head went back and the little car shook with his laughter.

"Are you serious?" he asked, after a moment. "Are you really proposing to me, a girl like you proposing to a man like me?"

Tomi stiffened. Every nerve stood on protesting edge. Every ingrained inhibition clamored for revenge. Words, slashing scathing words, drummed at her lips.

"A girl like you."

The dark window threw back her reflection, mud caked hair, mud streaked face, mud sodden blouse. She looked like a gamin. That's what she was, half this and half that and nobody loved her, really.

"I clean up well," she offered, hopelessly.

"Oh, Tomi, darling, I didn't mean—" Tomi sank her head into the suddenly close shoulder, lifted it to receive an ambrosial kiss flavored with tulle and pond mud.

"I meant that it took courage for a girl of your spirit to propose to a man who had talked to you the way I talked after my . . . submersion."

Tomi nodded. It had taken courage. But Allen Bartell was worth it—"and you'll teach me to look before I leap?" she pleaded, submissively.

"Look before you . . . listen, we're getting right back to the farm and into dry clothes, I've a change at the cabin. And then we're hopping a plane for Reno."

"Reno," gasped Tomi, "Allen, we're not married yet—"

"And we have to wait three days after filing intentions if we marry in this state. I'm not taking any chances of you looking before you make this leap—"

"But . . . shouldn't you?"

"I have been looking ever since you slid into my arms in the Toland parlor. And what's more, I think our friend and great uncle Timothy Toland looked for both of us and prayed we'd leap."

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Cancer

APRIL is Cancer Control Month as provided by congress. In 46 states the Women's Field Army Against Cancer is conducting an active educational program.

Not very long ago cancer was a taboo topic. Everyone knew it existed and nobody dared mention it. Even now it is considered an unpleasant word. But the fact that it is an unwelcome or disagreeable subject does not cancel the obligation of the writer on public health to discuss it.

The dangers which are present for the speaker or writer before the public on the subject are, first, that he will make it disgusting and, second, that he will create unnecessary fear.

The first danger need never be present. Cancer is a clean disease and not disgusting; in fact, one of the points in the fight against it is that it is so unobtrusive, it makes itself known so little that the early stages are liable to be passed before anything is done.

As for the second danger, that of creating unnecessary fear, time has moved so so that we do not feel that way any more. There is something to be done for cancer and the earlier it is done, the more effective it is. So we feel in drawing attention to cancer—its danger and its symptoms—we are not idly or unnecessarily fightening you, because we have something concrete and constructive to offer in the way of cure, which was not true a few decades ago.

I like the distinction that has been made between a health article that, instead of "scaring you to death," "scares you to life." If you are scared to the extent that you have something done to save your life, it is a good thing to scare you a little.

A hopeful example exists in the Cured Cancer club, sponsored by Dr. Anna C. Palmer, of Milton, Mass., who herself was operated on for cancer in 1920. There were 20,195 people listed by the American College of Surgeons in 1938 as cured of cancer. There must be many more.

The Cured Cancer club is open to anyone who is vouched for by his physician as having been cured of cancer for at least five years. The applicant need only subscribe to the statement, "I am willing to be known publicly as a cured cancer patient."

This column will discuss one of the phases of cancer once a week during the month of April. I do not want to make the subject oppressive but feel that it is my duty to bring good news from the fighting front of cancer control.

To aid in cancer control, educational pamphlets on "The Fight on the Women's Field Army Against Cancer" and "What to Know—What to Do About Cancer" are distributed by the American Society for the Control of Cancer, 350 Madison avenue, New York City, and may be obtained for 10 cents apiece.

Election Supply Awards Made

Unusual Variation in Bids Commented on by Officials; Marion, Columbus Firms Get Contracts.

Contracts for supplies, mostly for the primary election May 14, were awarded last night by the county board of elections after consideration of widely varied bids.

The board contracted for the supplies at a total cost of $596. High bids for the same supplies totaled $1,570, almost three times as much. The variation in bids was unusual, officials said.

The action was taken at a special board meeting at headquarters on East Center street. Three different contracts were let.

Ballot Award

The contract for 23,200 ballots for the primaries went to the Vaughan Printing House of Marion on its bid of $325. Other bids were Monarch Printing & Supply Co. of Marion, $595; Unique Printing Co. of Marion, $749.50.

The ballots included 12,350 Republican and 10,850 Democratic.

Contract for poll books and tally sheets for the 57 precincts in the county was awarded to the F. J. Heer Printing Co. of Columbus which bid $171 for supplying both the May and November elections. It bid $85.50 for each election.

The Johnson-Watson Co. of Dayton bid $238 for the primaries and $248 for the general election and $456 for both together.

The Columbus Blank Book Co. of Columbus bid $513 for both together.

The Fred Proctor Co. of Cincinnati bid $786 for the two elections, highest of all.

The T. J. Maxwell Printing Co. of Fremont bid $197 for the primaries, $177 for the general election and $317 for the two together.

Poll Lists

The third contract let was for poll lists for the 30 registration precincts in Marion city. The Heer Co., Johnson-Watson Co. and Maxwell Co. all submitted bids of $30 and the board granted the contract to the Heer Co. since it had entered such a low bid for the poll books and tally sheets. One other bid was made on the poll lists, the Columbus Blank Book Co. offering to do the job for $34.50.

PIANIST TO PRESENT PROGRAM TONIGHT

New Type Piano Demonstration Arranged for Public.

Arrangements were completed today for a concert to be given at The Star auditorium tonight featuring the new-type Storytone piano.

The concert, sponsored by the Harden music store, local distributors of the Storytone pianos, is scheduled to begin at 8:15 o'clock. It is open to the public without charge.

The program will be played by Miss Martha Sherman who is making a nationwide concert tour for the Story & Clark Piano Co. and the RCA-Victor Manufacturing Co. which jointly developed the Storytone piano. In addition to the concert, she is giving demonstrations at the Harden music store on South Main street.

Last summer Miss Sherman gave daily concerts on the Storytone at the New York World's Fair.

While the concert tonight is the first large, public demonstration of the Storytone which has been given in Marion, the instrument has been widely discussed for more than a year and is generally regarded in music circles as one of the outstanding developments in the music field in several years.

Two young wives compare budgets

Mrs. Brown: "I think your new luncheon dishes are lovely, Joan—they're so colorful and smart looking. But really, I don't know how you manage."

Mrs. Smith: "What do you mean, Mary?"

Mrs. Brown: "Well, the other day you said your household allowance was the same as mine—and I never have a cent left over for any extras—like new dishes as beautiful as these."

Mrs. Smith: "Why Mary, these dishes weren't expensive. I saw them advertised in the paper. I also saw that handy coffee table you like, advertised in the paper—so I just picked up the phone and ordered it."

Mrs. Brown: "Don't tell me you bought that out of your household allowance."

Mrs. Smith: "I certainly did. Mary."

Mrs. Brown: "Well—I thought I was a good bargain hunter—how do you do it?"

Mrs. Smith: "I just go over our newspaper every day—check all the food, drug, laundry, linen and hardware ads for specials. Practically every week I wind up with a saving—so I just put it aside for some little thing I'd like, such as new dishes, an odd table, throw rug, a lamp—sometimes a few extra pair of hose."

Mrs. Brown: "Here's where I start checking the ads—this very day. If I can stretch my budget half as much as you do, I'll be satisfied."

Check the offerings of our advertisers each day. See how much you, too, can save on food, clothing and household wares by following the many specials listed in the pages of

FARMERS FEARFUL ABOUT SUPER-HIGHWAY PLANS

Afraid They Will Draw Funds from Farm-Market Roads.

WASHINGTON — "If highway diversion is to be tolerated, then the farm and small town communities had as well bid goodbye to great mileages of farm-to-market roads; to lesser mileages of the so-called primary roads; and to the effective advent of that period which we call highway planning," said Chester H. Gray, director of the National Highway Users Conference, at the eighth annual meeting of the Association of Towns of the State of New York at Albany.

"The problem of diversion of highway revenues is particularly acute in New York state. It is more than acute to all citizens in this state who live on farms or in the so-called country town. According to present information, New York state in the current fiscal year will divert approximately $73,000,000 of highway funds which have been paid in mostly at the filling stations where gasoline is bought; and at the registration desks where annual tags are secured for automobiles and trucks.

CONFERENCE ON FIRE PROTECTION DELAYED

Mayor Reports Proposed Session Put Off Week.

Because of difficulty in finding a suitable time this week, a proposed conference between city officials and community leaders on whether steps should be taken to raise funds for improving fire protection facilities will not be held until next week, Mayor Snare announced today.

The mayor is seeking to arrange the conference to sound out sentiment. The matter revolves around financing the improvements which were recently recommended by the National Board of Fire Underwriters after a survey here.

If the public expresses a desire for a tax levy to finance the improvements, such a levy might be put up at the May 14 primaries, officials said.

However, even if a levy were proposed, there is doubt in some quarters as to whether it could be placed on the ballot. They believe the law provides that only emergency matters may be dealt with at a primary election.

When city council meets Monday night at 7:30 it is expected that both the question of financing relief and the proposed fire protection improvements will be up for discussion. Officials do not expect any action to be taken Monday toward submitting tax levies for the primaries. A special council meeting later might be called to consider such action.

ading for Youth Is Major Theme of District Librarians' Conference

n "Children of the y Mary Brewster Hol- Delaware, author, and relative to library k work of the juvenile t of the library made fternoon session of the nference of the North District of the Ohio Li- ation here yesterday. the meeting there was the city library.

ian 100 librarians and trustees attended the which was arranged by Sara Semmelstine of Marion, associated with the Ash- ble library. Guests in- Paul A. T. Noon of Co- state librarian, Miss Mil- ge of Columbus, state organizer, W. J. Hamil- Dayton, librarian of the library in that city and dent of the Ohio Library as- sociations, J. J. Weadock, Jr., of Lima, James C. Foutts of Columbus, who is associated with the state library. All spoke informally at the luncheon at Hotel Harding for which Miss Helen Kramer, librarian at the City library presided.

Speaks About China

Mrs. Hollister, author of many children's books, has spent some time in China and had with her a number of articles of interest from that country. The theme of her talk centered on the heritage of the Chinese children.

At the meeting of librarians in charge of adult departments held at Hotel Harding, the speakers were Miss Elizabeth Bovee of Bellefontaine, Mrs. Cora J. Bailey of the Westerville Public library and Miss Lois MacKellar of the Mansfield public library.

Mrs. Ethel Miller, who is in charge of the children's department at the city library, presided for the conference of librarians in charge of children's books, at the library. Miss Jessie Hershiser of Tiffin talked on appreciation of the art of reading and suggested methods of its development. To teach children to interpret and appreciate good art is quite as desirable as to read and enjoy a good book, she stated, and she suggested hanging of good pictures in the children's room. "If you have a story hour a good way to interest the children is through a good picture," she suggested.

Youth Theme Discussed

Miss Ruth Culbertson, librarian at the Mansfield high school, talked on "The School Librarian Looks at Youth and Its Problems." She brought out the fact that books on etiquette for boys and girls are becoming more noticeable on the library shelves and suggested the following volumes, all of which are to be had at the Marion library: "The Right Thing," and "The Correct Thing" by William O. Stevens, for boys in the teen age. "It's More Fun When You Know the Rules." "Behave Yourself." Betty Allen. Miss Kathleen Brown, librarian at the Marysville library, discussed "Non-Fiction, Its Importance to Youth." She called attention to the decided change in the makeup of all educational books for children, and said writers and publishers had made them so much more attractive that although the content is authentic, the general appearance of the book makes it much more attractive to the reader. In her list of worthwhile books she mentioned "The Treasure Hunter," by Proudfit, which is a story of the life of Robert Louis Stevenson. "Chanting Jennie Lind," by Laura Benet, "Mary Stuart," by Mildred Criss and many others on the shelves of the Marion library. Career books are in demand she said, and suggested titles included "Vocations for Girls" and "Vocations for Boys" by Lingenfelter, "What Do You Want To Be?" a boys' book, by George Waltz, Jr., and "Careers Ahead," by Coltier.

Tea at Library

The tea tables, laid in the south room of the library, were attractive with bowls of spring flowers and candles in pastel shades. Presiding were Mrs. Fillmore Young and Miss Louise Cunningham, members of the library board. Assisting in serving were Misses Barbara Gottschall, Carolyn King, Helen Ditter and Helen Louise Schaffner. Assisting also were Mrs. Herman S. Rhu, Mrs. H. K. Henderson and Mrs. Harold K. Mouser.

Hostesses for the conference were Miss Helen Kramer, librarian, Mrs. Ethel Miller, Miss Florence Sneckenberger and Miss Mildred Collins, assistant librarians.

FARM PROGRAM ATTACKED BY OHIO CONGRESSMAN

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 4—The government is putting the farmer into debt without trying to protect domestic market, Rep. Cliff Clevenger (R-Ohio) told the house.

"If we are to save the American farmers, we must eliminate new deal theories and get down to practical economics," the Bryan congressman said. "We will not restore agriculture with reciprocal trade treaties that expose our farmers to importations of tropical oils which will crowd our lard from its natural market."
